EDITORIAL BRIEFS.

As between Curtis and Higgins, the President says, give me Eugene.

IVES, who failed in New York City last week for $20,000,000, is called the Ferdinard Ward of 1887.

IT is said that but for the American money that goes to Ireland the Irish agitation would soon cease.

MISS IDA SCHUYLER, an American girl, recently took the first prize as a singer at the Vienna conservatory.

BLAINE, Depew and Hawley are in Europe; Sherman in Alaska. Why do all these Republican Presidential candidates leave the country at the same time?

"There is evidently a great deal to be learned about women," says a Philadelphia editor. There is, indeed, and the best way to learn it is to ask some other woman about it.

ESTIMATING the loss by drought at $300,000,000 may strike one as big figures, but this country is no enormously wealthy that such items are scarcely missed when not paid in money.

COL. JNO. A. PIERCE, of Plantsville, Mass., claims to have a pneumatic invention by which to join the two continents, the distance to be accomplished at the rate of 1,000 miles an hour.

AMONG Americans who have been traveling in Europe recently is Fred Douglass, whose skin is pretty dark. He says that in Europe the color of his skin and the kinks in his hair were not noticed.

HORSE FLESH has come to the surface once again. The other day some jockey trotted Maud S, the famous mare, a mile in 2.10½. He was in ecstacy over the feat and believes the mare can trot a mile in 2.06.

WHILE "Buffalo Bill" is having a royal time over in England with his "Wild West Show," and giving big dinners to some of the dignitaries of London, Mrs. Buffalo Bill is suing for a divorce in this country.

THE Pittsburg Dispatch, though threatened with destruction by Saturday morning's fire, came out almost on time with its usual assortment of news. We congratulate the Dispatch and its readers upon its escape from the flames.

THE Republican State Convention will meet in Harrisburg to-day. Judge Henry W. Williams will be nominated supreme judge and Capt. Hart will be made State treasurer. It is said that Adjutant General Hastings will be the permanent chairman.

THOSE citizens of the United States who were beginning to fear that the British yacht Thistle would carry with her the America's cup when she returned home, are feeling more tranquil since the recent performances of the Valunteer. The cup is likely to remain on this side of the Atlantic.

THE specimen of royalty now creating a furore in New York City is a brother of the King of Siam. It is consoling to know that if we cannot have a genuine king we can at least have his brother. This young gentleman is only five feet high. He is said to be well educated and a gentleman.

KING DAVID KALAKAUA is threatened with coercion. He is a good deal like Ireland in this respect, but he differs in not having his quarrel just. It is feared that he will refuse to accept the new constitution, and, if he does, the people will force it on him just as they did the constitution of 1864. How much fun is there in being King when one isn't a King.

THE Ohio corn crop is a failing one, so of late potatoes. Athens and Scioto counties are exceptions in the corn prospects, and owing to seasonable showers they will likely have an average crop. The whole of the large Miami Valley, though, will fall below 50 per cent, of an average. The drouth has been most severe in the middle, western and northwestern parts of the State.

Hart for Treasurer—Williams for Supreme Judge.

Just as we go to press we have word from the convention. William B. Hart was nominated for State Treasurer by acclamation. For Supreme Judge—Williams 148, Mitchell 56.

Leaving a Sinking Ship.

The results of the recent Parliamentary elections in England have had a most distressing effect upon the members of the Unionist combination. Indeed, so embarrassing has the political situation become to them that rumors of disruption grow thicker every day. Not only has dissension been bred among themselves, but the distrust between them and the Tories is becoming stronger. It is reported in yesterday's despatches from London that two prominent Unionists will secede from the alliance this week, and that every man who has a care for his own safety is beginning to adopt the policy of the rats who desert a sinking ship.

The coalition of Tories and Liberal-Unionists was from the start an unnatural one. There was little in common between these two political elements. Their only bond of union was opposition to the Irish policy of Mr. Gladstone. On almost every other question in English politics such politicians as Lord Salisbury and W. H. Smith had little or no sympathy with such politicians as Lord Hartington and Joseph Chamberlain. Their tendencies, their traditions, the practices and habits of a life-time were diametrically opposite. There consequently has never been anything like a prospect that the alliance of these two sets of English politicians would last long after the Irish question had been disposed of. Even if there had been no Parliamentary elections this summer, it would have been only natural and reasonable to look forward to a conflict or to at least a slackening of the bonds between the Tories and the Unionists.

But these elections have suddenly convinced not a few of the Unionist politicians that they have been making a mistake, and that it will be impossible for them to bring their former followers in the Liberal party over to the Troy camp. Almost every one of the nine or ten recent Parliamentary elections has shown that the Unionist leaders have been powerless to win converts in their own party from among the masses of the voters. The hopes which the Tory politicians cherished of strengthening their party by means of the coalition with the dissident Liberals have thus been sadly disappointed. In their chagrin many of them, and particularly the old ingrained Tories of the country districts, seemed to be inclined to reproach their allies and to ask with some bitterness, what it is, after all, that they have gained by coming into political association with their life-long enemies.

The English politician is just as quick as an American politician to see the signs of the times and to run for cover when a storm is likely to break. The Unionists are no exception to the rule of sauve qui peut. They see, as plainly as they can see anything, that the results of the recent elections indicate a reaction in favor of Mr. Gladstone, and that they and the Tory party are in danger of going down altogether. It will not be surprising, therefore, during the coming autumn to learn that the most prudent are disposed to make terms of peace with Mr. Gladstone and to return once more to the shelter of the Liberal camp. If the coalition should outlast the year it will have more strength than there are any signs that it now possesses.

THE high-toned and conservative New York Evening Post has been convicted of deliberate falsification on the subject of civil service reform—and all in the interest of Mr. Cleveland. It is wrong to tell stories about anything, but especially is it wicked to misrepresent things in regard to such an eminently proper subject as civil service reform, which is intended to correct all the evils extant. In May last the Post gravely stated that the people were determined to support Cleveland in all his efforts toward this great reform. But Cleveland failed to reform worth a cent, so the Post has arrived at the conclusion that there is no sentiment of the kind among the people. The Post has no right to judge the people by the President's actions. We have all along considered that the people were a little better than the President, and this confirms us in that belief.

The Crowning Casualty.

The night of the 10th of August gave to the world the most appalling railroad accident which has ever occurred in this country. The details of the great catastrophe may be read in the telegrams. It contains about as many thrilling and distressing features as any such event that we have ever read. Coaches containing a thousand passengers plunging through a burning bridge, the wholesale destruction of more than one hundred; the serious wounding of four hundred others; the battling of the fire with only dust and dirt for four hours; the groans and shrieks of the dying—all are horrible. Then, how truly agonizing to read of the man who, finding that his wife and child were dead and both of his own limbs broken, ended his own life with a revolver. His was only one of the saddest of the many sad occurrences of that night and morning. We cannot go with the dead or suffering bodies to the several homes where exquisite agony is caused to hundreds more who sympathise and suffer with these stricken ones. The sum total of suffering caused by that plunge never can be told.

But who can read with equanimity the horrible suspicion that this was a deliberate plan to rob? It is horrible to believe that anyone could sacrifice so many lives and cause so much suffering for a few dollars. Yet, such seems to be the actual truth. Incarnate fiends were present at this dark scene pursuing their nefarious work. A pile of empty purses and pocket books was found not far away.

It is more difficult to prevent such serious accidents on reads which run through sparcely settled communities than it is on the Pennsylvania railroad. But sufficient care is not taken to prevent them. For instance, if there was a watchman at each bridge such an accident could not occur, and that much precaution surely should be taken.

Take Part in the Primaries.

The Republicans in all part of the county should remember that Saturday, the 27th instant, is the time for the primary election for the approaching convention, to occur on the 30th inst. We really suppose that whether few or many attend these primaries the delegates will be representative men and will fulfill their duties honestly. But it is desirable to have a very general participation in these primaries for reasons some of which may be given:—

Each voting precinct should be represented and it can be only in this way. The convention ought to be a very complete one. It will be beneficial to the party to have it so.

The Republicans should engage in the primaries from principle. Emergencies might arise at times which would make such action on their part absolutely necessary.

None but the very best men are named in connection with the Republican nominations, hence the ticket will surely be an excellent one, made up of the most able and honest men in the party, and thus possessing every requisite of a winning ticket.

HAWAII has at last a liberal constitution, and it may be hoped that complications between America and any other nation on account of that insignificant little kingdom are to be feared no longer. The right of free speech is proclaimed and legislation for the restrainment of liberty of speech or of the press is prevented for all time. The Legislature, consisting of nobles and popular representatives in joint session, is to be the check upon the executive power of the King and his Cabinet. The Crown's authority is restricted. Legislative consent will be necessary for the proclamation of war and for the organization of military or naval forces. It is said that King Kalakaua's power is now limited to granting pardons and drawing his salary. As he is an easy-going, good-natured sort of a sovereign, and something of a sybarite in his way, these two occupations will doubtless prove very much to his liking.

ONE feature of the United Labor or George party, will strike most persons favorably, to wit: There is no scramble for the nominations. It is to be said also, there is no prospect of an election for any candidate. But there is great honor in running as the representative of great principles. Gideon J. Tucker, nine years ago, as the Green-back candidate for Judge of Court of Appeals, received 73,000 votes outside of the city. He is now one of the leaders of the United Labor party and may head the ticket this year, and 250,000 votes is mentioned as something that would not be a surprise.

IT may seem cruel, but on the authority of a regular correspondent at Washington, D. C., we must ventilate a fraud that has just come to the surface in the Department presided over by the dudish Whitney, of Standard Oil fame. Paymaster George R. Watkins, United States Navy, has been dismissed the service by a court-martial for the following good and sufficient reasons. Issuing clothes and supplies to the sailors and mariners and charging the same as cash; of buying coal above market rates and of certifying falsely contrary to facts: charging cash payments to dead men of other similar charges, and of disobedience to orders and of desertion. Before being dismissed, the Paymaster must serve his country three years in the penitentiary. His clerk convicted of forgery and malicious destruction of public records, was sentenced to four years in prison, and to pay a fine of $1,000. The President has remitted the fine and reduced the imprisonment to two years.

WHETHER or not the world is getting better it seems to us that the tendency of modern thought and action is deleterious. It is seen in the loose sentiment so generally prevailing to disregard safe and judicious Sunday laws. The preservation of the American Sunday as sacred is the bulwark of our liberties. On it depends the continuance of this country as a free Republic. Sunday is the best day the laboring man has. Its rest is one of the lines of demarkation which distinguish him from a veritable slave. But the laboring man is himself most disposed to disregard it, clamoring for open libraries, exhibitions, etc., on that day. These things encourage employers also to think that they may make their employes work on that day. Thus, the laboring man who disregards the Sabbath cuts off his own head. Think of this and if you are wise profit by it. 'Tis said that "a word to the wise is sufficient."

OBEDIENCE is the necessary qualification for a soldier and it found a brilliant illustration at Camp Hancock on Thursday of last week. The soldiers were ordered to assemble at a certain hour for dress parade. A great storm came up. Only a few of the soldiers assembled at the time, most of them believing that the storm was sufficient excuse for not doing so. A few, however, remained in their places on parade all through a drenching rain storm. They believed that they should be at the post of duty even if the heavens should fall. We think they were right in doing so and are pleased to notice that Governor Beaver has since publicly commended the action. They displayed true soldierly qualities.

Blaine on the Continent.

It turns out just as we supposed, that Mr. Blaine had no intention of returning home until the time appointed for his visit is concluded. More than that, Mr. Blaine has crossed the channel to the continent. While in England he was so thronged with invitations that escape from them was imperatively necessary. It is to be hoped that he will now be permitted to have a few weeks rest and recreation. Despite his exciting duties, however, his weight, since he has been in England, increased five pounds and he now tips the scales at 190 avoirdupois. The announcement is made that he is not concerning himself in regard to the political movements in this country.

MR. T. P. RYNDER, of Milesburg, who has filled the position, for several years, of State Chairman of the Greenback party, announces that he is an independent candidate for register. In connection with that announcement he desires us to remind the people that he has for years been in favor of putting all the soldiers on the pension roll. He also says that he was the author of the appointment of the congressional committee to inquire into the cause of the southwestern strike, which effected a great deal in the interest of labor.

A NEW YORK paper makes the admission that were the election to come off now with Blaine and Cleveland for candidates, Blaine would stand a fair chance of carrying Kentucky. On any free trade platform Kentucky will go Republican as things look now.

A Lesson to Profit By.

Our readers have been horrified by the details of the horrid slaughter that occurred on the Toledo, Peoria & Western Railroad last week, and no doubt readily accepted the theory advanced by some that there was grave reason to believe that the burning of the bridge was the work of thieves. We never, however, accepted this theory, having more faith in the goodness of humanity than to accept such a terrible conclusion. Now the testimony is being taken by the coroners jury and so far as it goes, official and otherwise, there is as yet no valid ground for the belief that the bridge was maliciously fired, or that the train might not have been saved under a proper system of inspection and watching.

There is a penny-wise-and-pound-foolish method of running railways, a fact which has been demonstrated often encugh to open the eyes of railway managers who are capable of learning through the experience of others. Take as one of the most recent examples, the Bussy bridge disaster on the Boston & Providence railroad. That company has already paid in damages $450,000, and it is estimated that as much more will be required to settle pending claims. With the cost of a stone arch to replace the defective bridge added to the damage claims, the total loss to the railroad company will not fall far below a round million dollars. This is certainly costly negligence, and the railway managers who pay no attention to these warnings, preferring to trust to luck, are not fit for the places they occupy.

There is an adage among railroad men that it is cheaper to kill a passenger than to cripple him, and the frightful number of killed in the Chatsworth disaster may serve to test the truth of the saying. The list of injured is long enough, however, to run up a large aggregate in damages, possibly double that incurred by the Boston company. This is taking no account of the indirect losses which such casualties bring, and they are by no means inconsiderable. Every railroad company in the country can profit by these fearful lessons if they will. The dearest economy is that which dispenses with the men necessary to guard the roadbed and to see that there is a safe passage for trains.

IF the Chatsworth disaster should bankrupt the road, as many say it will, it would be no more than a just punishment for their gross negligence. It is said that the claims brought against it will exceed a million dollars. If they were only able to pay, no one need to care; but the fear is that the sufferers would not be able to collect the judgment when obtained.

PRINCE FERDINAND, of Saxe-Coburg, Gotha, who is going to be ruler of Bulgaria, seems to be a bold genius. He does not consult the so-called "Powers" as to their will in the matter, but goes boldly forward. That's the right sort of independence. What business can it be to the other countries, anyhow? If the Prince wants to be the ruler and the Bulgarians want him to rule that is all that is necessary.

THE man who has predicted a cataclysm for Mexico, to occur August 10th, found that the only sufferer was himself for he had to fly to escape from the indignation of the people. If the predicted earthquake had occurred and killed a few thousand people he would have been a big man, but they don't stand nonsense as patiently in Mexico as in this country.

RIDDLEBERGER, one of the Senators from Virginia, who has several times made himself ridiculously conspicuous while on duty in the Senate, is now in trouble at his home. He did not treat the Court with proper respect which induced the Judge to imprison him. Just what was the occasion of his presence in court we do not know.

NOTWITHSTANDING the crop failure in some parts of the Northwest, a Minneapolis dispatch says: "The wheat so far received from the thresher justifies all previous predictions as to a large crop, and it really looks now as if the Northwest would have more wheat to sell this year than for the past five years."

WE can never be convinced that Mrs. Cleveland is beautiful—nay, not even good looking—until we have optical proof of the fact. Because some of the newspapers say so does not convince us. They would say the same about any woman who occupies Mrs. Cleveland's position.

THE BLESSED BATH.

Blessed is the bath
Be it in the mighty ocean,
With its ever swelling motion,
Clasping maidenhood divine
In its "green and glassy brine,"
Choking off the man who chatters,
Tearing dignity to tatters.
Lighting up the bathers gay
With an aureole of spray,
Fondling beauty as it swims
In a mad'ning swirl of limbs.
Nature few such tonics hath
As the bath!

Blessed is the bath!
Be it by the river side,
Where the gamin doth abide,
Where he dresses "on the run,"
Where his towel is the sun,
Where his bold ablutions cease,
Where the sentry yells "Police!"
Where he flaunts without distress
His barbaric nakedness
Plunging downward, hissing hot,
From the most unlikely spot,
Plowing deep his watery path
Through the bath!

Blessed is the bath!
Where you're roasted, grilled and boiled
Till you're satisfied you're spoiled;
Where you're rubbed and drubbed and scrubbed,
Thumped and kneaded, steamed and tubbed;
Thrown on beds—but not of roses—
Played upon by various hoses,
Hammered at an awful rate,
Ere you lose your real estate.
Then, when all the torture's over,
Tucked away in blissful clover,
Drowned forever is your wrath
In the bath.

Blessed is the bath!
Though your basin is a small one,
Though your room is but a "hall" one,
Though you cannot make a plunge
With a pitcher and a sponge,
Though you nervously may grope
For the hard and slippery soap,
And despite of all objections
Have to bathe yourself in sections,
Standing while you drip and drain,
Till your towel dries again—
Surely e'en some merit hath Such a bath.

—ED. E. KIDDER.

FOR EXPECTANT BRIDEGROOMS.

A husband duly trained should be
A model of sagacity,
Should understand especially
The marvelous capacity,
The clever perspicacity
Of woman's wisdom and esprit,
Compared with his opacity;
Should listen silently when she
Indulges in loquacity,
And trust unhesitatingly
Her knowledge and veracity.

If now and then she chance to be Comparatively tacit, he
May venture the audacity
To speak a word respectfully.
If she unnoticed pass it, he
Must show no pertinacity,
No masculine pugnacity,
But humbly wait, and patiently,
To swallow with voracity
Whatever crumbs of wisdom she
May drop, and to her precepts he Should cleave with meek tenacity.

Our Story Teller'

A FLORIDA FLIGHT.

"Don't mind about him, Ethel, he's too small to care. Tell him you thought he wasn't coming; that he must have forgotten about it. See nearly all the places are taken up now."

Frank Vonbenscom spoke rapidly, and offered his arm to Miss Grange in almost unseemly haste. He was a tall fellow of seventeen, with his long slender neck encircled by a collar of the cuff pattern, and wearing beneath his dress coat a very conspicuous white vest with gold buttons. Indeed, the elaborateness of his toilet had been the cause of his presenting himself just too late in the ball room to secure a legitimate partner for the "Saratoga."

He had espied Ethel Grrnge, however and was now endeavoring to make her break an engagement with her devoted little knight, Archie Easton.

Now Archie belonged unmistakably to the small boys, and Frank felt that such had no rights in a ball room, that he, of the genus dude was bound to respect.

Nevertheless, he was somewhat disconcerted to hear behind him just at this moment, Archie's clear treble saying: "Here I am, Miss Grange. Uncle Will is saving a place for us in his set."

"Too late, young man," drawled Frank, turning to the boy, with an offhand smile, "Miss Grange thought you weren't coming, so she——"

"Oh, all right, I'm awfully sorry, but I stayed so long just to be sure of getting a place in the set where Miss Grange said she wanted to dance;" and although the handsome little fellow's lip almost trembled from the excessiveness of his disappointment, he smiled politely and made a graceful bow of acquiescence.

"Wait, Archie?" exclaimed Miss Grange, trying to disengage her arm from that of young Vonbenscom.

But the latter rudely pressed it close to him, at the same time muttering: "Oh, don't bother about him, Ethel, he's only a small boy, and it isn't just the thing for you to give up your dance to such kids."

At that instant the music struck up the "Mikado," and the young dandy hurried off with his prize

But Archie heard his last words, and they rankled within him like a poisoned arrow.

"It isn't any crime to be young," he told himself, "and I know I can dance better than he can, if he isn't any lighter on his feet than he was at dancing-school last fall. And I know, too, Miss Grange wouldn't have gone off with him that way, and left me when she had promised me this lancers, if he hadn't made her. It wasn't a bit like a gentleman in him, and if I was big——"

Archie did not finish his sentence, but glanced down at his knickerbockered legs with half a sigh, as if he would gladly have exchanged their trimness for the less picturesque long trousers that clothe those of more mature years.

Then he sauntered forth on the piazza, and thence out under the peaceful starlight of the Florida skies.

The Eastons had been coming to this charming winter resort for many seasons, always bringing their son and his tutor with them. This season they had met the Granges at the hotel, and a very pleasant friendship has sprung up between Miss Ethel, who was pretty well on in her teens, and Archie, who was just entering them.

Frank Vonbenscom had arrived from New York that evening, just in time to display his fascinations at the weekly "hop;"—"and to call me a kid right before Miss Grange," added Archie to himself, with a sharp setting of his white teeth. "It wasn't my fault he was too late to get a partner, and it isn't fair that I should suffer for it."

Now it must not be supposed that our hero of thirteen was jealous of the attentions paid to a young lady some six years his senior. He was far too sensible to be troubled by any such silly notions at his age. All that exasperated him was the high-handed manner in which Vonbenscom had brushed him aside.

"I'd like to get even with him in some way," he muttered, "though I wouldn't want to make myself like him enough to be mean about it."

Thus, as will be seen, Master Archie had his temper under very good control, and, after a few rounds under the trees, he returned to the ball room

He managed to secure Miss Grange for the "Swedish," accepted very gracefully her regrets for the lancers episode and finally went up to his room at ten o'clock with never a thought of Vonbenscom, and little dreaming of the manner in which he was destined "to get even with him."

The next day was such as causes the hearts of Florida hotel keepers to rejoice within them, for the sun shone warm as a Northern noon in June, and all nature appeared to rejoice in the fact that their lot had been cast in a land of perpetual summer.

In the course of the conversation between them during that "Saratoga" the previous evening, Miss Ethel had chanced to mention to Vonbenscom a charming nook on a little creek she had chanced upon in one of her walks.

"It is really a bit of tropical scenery," she had declared in her enthusiasm, "with hanging moss on the trees, rare creeping vines, and the most beautiful lights and shadows glinting through the trees on the foliage by the water side."

Young Vonbenscom straightway affirmed that this was the most poetical description of a landscape his ears had ever listened to.

"Won't you take me there to-morrow, Ethel?" he pleaded, in his sentimental fashion. "You know I am a total stranger to Florida beauties, and the honor of being guided to such beautiful waters by so fair a pilot would be one, I can assure you, that I will be willing to repay with any knightly service you may choose to command."

As Ethel was very anxious to revisit herself the lovely spot she had discovered, she consented to accompany Vonbenscom hither the following morning. Therefore, noontime of the perfect day, already described, found the two wending their way through the town in the direction of a grove that lay just outside of its limits.

"This is certainly entrancing, Ethel," exclaimed the romantic Frank, as they entered the forest with its carpet of softest grass, its decorations of luxuriant plants and vines, not to mention its orchestra of birds, whose music intermingled itself with the fascinating gurgle of a neighboring brook.

At least it was in the foregoing strain that Vonbenscom described to Miss Grange his impressions of the place.

"But you're not quite correct as to the gurgle, Frank," she laughed. "You know it's only when water runs over rocky beds that it gurgles. The streams hereabouts are as quiet and placid as peols. But here we are. One step beyond this bush, and then prepare to be overwhelmed. No, you're the guest of the occasion, you know; so I want you to take the first peep; then step back and tell me what you think of it."

In obedience to his instructions, Vonbenscom took his peep, but his head had scarcely vanished around the bend, than it reappeared with startling rapidity, and the "gallant knight" tumbled, rather than stepped backwards, nearly overturning Miss Grange in his sudden movement.

"Run, run for your life," he gasped, as, just taking time to turn around, he made a straight dash for the town. Luckily, however, he had not yet had time to acquire full headway, or it would have fared badly with Archie Easton, who just then chanced to come strolling by, on his daily walk after morning lessons.

As it was, the two came plump against each other, but Vonbenscom stopped only long enough to exclaim, with blanched lips:

"Miss Grange! Warn her! The savages! I'm going to get help;" and then he was off again, leaving Archie leaning up against a tree, in a daze of surprise and bewilderment.

"Why, Archie, you here!" exclaimed the pleasant voice of Ethel, at his side, the next minute. "Oh, dear, I never heard anything so funny. But come quick, and I'll show you what terrified Frank so;" and, catching him by the hand, Ethel drew the still bewildered boy out on the little promontory.

"Now peek around under the branch," she said, "and you will see what has frightened our brave Mr. Frank half out of his wits."

Archie did so, and beheld an old Indian, his blanket thrown back, so as not to impede his movements, paddling slowly up the stream in his canoe.

"Why, it's old Marco!" he exclaimed, "I wonder if he wouldn't take us aboard."

Ethel's laugh echoed merrily through the grove, as she answered with mock horror:

"And would you trust yourself with that bloodthirsty savage!"

Then Archie saw through it all.

"So that's what scared that fellow Vonbenscom out of his boots!" he cried excitedly. "I met him tearing through the woods like mad. He said he was going to get help, and told me to warn you. Oh, dear to think of anybody being afraid of Marco!" and Archie laughed merrily.

For Marco was a perfectly harmless old Indian from the Fort, whom the hotel proprietors had employed for years to take out boating parties.

As soon as he caught sight of the two watching him on the shore, he dropped his paddle in order to readjust his blanket, and then answered Archie's hail by directing the course of the canoe in toward the promontory.

* * * * * *

Great was the excitement at the hotel when young Vonbenscom came flying up, calling upon volunteers to aid him in rescuing Miss Grange from the Indians.

He affected to be deeply disgusted with the apathy displayed by those who his story through, and at last started off as though determined to return and deliver the captive maiden single-handed.

But as he was passing out of the grounds he was transfixed with amazement on beholding Ethel and the despised "kid," Archie, being handed out of the canoe by the very bloodthirsty savage from whom he had so incontinently fled.

"What was your hurry, Frank?" Ethel could not resist calling out, and in the utter hopelessness of Vonbenscom's expression on hearing this question, Archie saw that he had "got even with him" already.—Golden Argosy.

The Veiled Prophet.

New York Sun.

He dreamed that he was already in St. Louis and stood on the balcony of the Southern Hotel, waiting for the procession. The streets below surged with enthusiastic citizens. They all threw up their hats and shouted: "Grover Cleveland for 1888!"

It sounded far off as shouts do in dreams, yet the welcome words were distinctly intelligible.

Then a burst of music announced that the head of the procession was nearing the place where the President stood. The guest of the city started back as if in surprise. For it was not the rich blare of a full brass band that he heard, but the sharp staccato of fifes and drums playing a soldiers' march.

The crowd in the street separated right and left. "Left! left! left! left!" came in the measured tread of the marchers, and the head of the mighty procession swept by.

This was no carnival scene. The President looked down the long line, but not a float or a barge or a decorated wagon or an allegorical tableau was in sight. No maskers, no mummers. Nothing but men plainly dressed in blue, most of them of middle age or beyond, marching always in grim earnest to the music of fife and drum.

The guest of the city turned indignantly to the chairman of the Committee on Entertainments, who stood just behind him. "What does this mean? Is an insult intended?"

The committeeman shook his head urbanely and put his finger to his lips. Then he pointed down the line. It seemed to be endless.

Still they came, platoon after platoon "Left! left! left! left!" a steady rhythmic tread punctuated now and then by the clinking heckle of a pair of iron-shod crutches.

Some of the marchers wore empty coat sleeves pinned upon the breast Some of them marched with difficulty. None of them glanced up at the balcony where the guest of the city stood. They moved straight onward, as if they were marching to a combat.

The President sighed. "I did not know there were so many of them," he said.

On they came—"left! left! left!"—thousands, tens of thousands, hundreds of thousands of Union veterans. And every few minutes hoarse cheers went up from the crowd of spectators that lined the way. The cheers were no longer for the man on the balcony or for 1888. They were for the bullet-ridden, tattered, ragged and blood-stained battle flags that were borne by, and for the memory of the battle years in the sixties.

The minutes seemed hours to the President, and the hours seemed an eternity, while he stood and reviewed the grim paraders, who paid no heed to his presence. At last a welcome sound relieved his ears, weary of the monotonous tramping. He heard the rumbling of wheels. "The Veiled Prophet!" somebody shouted. "Here he comes?"

As the massive car approached, drawn by a score of white horses, the cheering below became continuous. The guest of the city leaned over the balustrade, the better to see the pageant. The car was handsomely decorated with flowers and bunting. On the summit of the construction stood a single figure, a man wearing as a veil over his face the flag of the United States.

The car stopped just opposite the hotel entrance. The Prophet slowly removed the veil that had concealed his features and stood face to face with the President. He said nothing, but stretched his arm forth and pointed with a most significant gesture to the long line of veterans ahead, their backs now all turned to Grover Cleveland, all marching steadily away from him into the distance.

The President recognized the Veiled Prophet. "It is George Brinski, my substitute!" he murmured. He turned away and awoke. It had been a bad dream.

Monitor and Merrimac.

One tall, slender man, with full gray beard and a manner which shows you that his sixty years have been full of strange experiences, took great interest in the nightly representation of the battle between the Monitor and Merrimac at the drill grounds. He knows better than any one else, perhaps, how far the "play" has been from absolute accuracy in an historical standpoint, yet the mimic battle has brought vividly to his mind the detailed events here represented and in which he had a prominent part. His name is Admiral John L. Worden, and he is the man who commanded the Monitor in that trying hour of experiment, an hour and a success which probably saved the nation.

"It was an hour of great anxiety," he said, talking of it, "when we made that experiment, just a quarter of a century ago, for it was in March, 1862, you know. We had been under a terrible of anxiety and work coming down from New York to Hampton roads, for there was nothing known of the capacity of the vessel for enduring a sea voyage or what she would do in a fight. The voyage down was a very rough one and sometimes it seemed that we must go to the bottom. The seas swept over us and poured down the smoke holes and put out our fires and suffocated the men with gas from the furnaces so that they fell as if dead. The result was that our men were worn out with work and lack of sleep and proper food when we reached Hampton Roads."

"Did you have confidence in the ability of the vessel to encounter the Merrimac?"

"I was confident that the Monitor could do good service in quiet waters. My chief fear was that the revolving turret would get out of order in the fight and refuse to go round. The opinion had been expressed by naval officers that the first shot which struck the turret would put it out of kilter, and that it would not revolve. But when the first shot struck her and the others began to pour in, and she still worked like a charm, I had no more anxiety about the result. When I saw the Merrimac making for us I felt confident that we were a match for her. I put 'bows on' and fired straight upon the monster. Shots were exchanged pretty fast. Sometimes we were no further apart than across that street. I remember once trying to cut off her propeller by running our vessel into it, but missed it probably not over six inches. Once she attempted to run us down with her ram, but by a quick turn we received the blow at such an angle that it did us no danger."

"Could you see that your shots were taking effect upon the Merrimac, whose sloping sides of railroad iron had been apparently impervious to the shots of other vessels?"

"Yes, in my report made some time afterwards, and recently published, you will find these words:—'Every shot from our guns took effect upon the huge side of our adversary, stripping off the iron freely.'

"The powder marks which you carry across your forehead and eyes are the result of this engagement?"

"Yes. In the last part of the fight a shell from the enemy struck the pilot house just over the peep hole, out of which I was looking. I was knocked down and completely blinded. The blow was right in my eyes, but from the flood of light which followed, and of which I was conscious, as one is conscious of light when his eyes are closed, I knew that the roof had been torn off the pilot house, and I did not know what other damage was done. So I gave orders as I lay there to "bear off." As soon as Lieutenant Green could be brought from the turret I placed him in command and was taken below. Within twenty minutes he had the damages repaired and turned back to renew the fight with the Merrimac, but before we could get at close quarters she retired in the direction of Norfolk."

This memorable battle between these then remarkable vessels lasted nearly four hours. It began at eight in the morning and continued with but about fifteen minutes interruption (while the Monitor was hoisting shot to her tower) until near noon. Lieutenant Green, who was in command of the guns in the turret during the fight, and who was placed in command of the vessel when Captain Worden was wounded, in a letter to his mother after the fight was over, after describing the fight, which began about eight o'clock in the morning, said: "At half-past seven the Captain sent for me. I went forward and there stood as noble a man as ever lived. His face was perfectly black with powder and iron, and he was apparently blind. I asked him what was the matter, and he said a shot had struck the pilot house directly opposite his eyes, blinding them." Continuing the story of the remaining portion of the battle, he says: "When the fight was over and we were victorious, my men and myself were perfectly black with smoke and powder. All my underclothes were perfectly black, and my person was in the same condition. When our noble captain (Worden) heard that the Merrimac had retreated, he said that he was perfectly happy and ready to die."

But he did not die, though he has never recovered his full health, for Admiral Worden is to-day, twenty-five years later, still an honored citizen of Washington.—Washington Correspondent Omaha World.

A Hateful Man.

New York News.

Wife (to husband who had just returned home)—What's the news down town!

Husband—Nothing.

Wife—Of course not.

Husband—Why of course not?

Wife—Oh, well, there is never any news for a woman unless she finds it out herself.

Husband (after a long silence)—It does seem to me that people ought to be more careful.

Wife—What about?

Husband—I was thinking of something that occurred downtown to-night. Major Buxter and his family sat out on the front steps until quite late, and when the Major got up and went into his room he had not noticed that his prankish little son had slipped away. Just as the Major stepped into his room he heard something under the bed—in fact, saw something—and, thinking that a robber had secreted himself there, he seized a pistol and fired under the bed, and—

Wife—Merciful heavens, and shot his little son?

Husband—Who said he shot his son?

Wife—You said that his son went under the bed.

Husband—I didn't.

Wife—What did you say?

Husband—I said that the Major did not notice his son when he slipped away from the front steps.

Wife (still excited)—And was the boy under the bed?

Husband—No, a cat was under the bed.

Wife—You are the most hateful man I ever saw.

Husband—Why so? Just because the boy did not go under the bed and get shot? I had nothing to do with it.

Wanted—A Young Man.

There were never so many openings for young men into business life as at the present day. The great railroad systems themselves present avenues in which thousands may gain a livelihood. The telegraph multiplying its miles of wire is crying out for skilled hands. How comparatively seldom we find young men learning to be carpenters, machinists, masons and like trades. Why is it, therefore, that so many young men are idle, having no settled employment, and parents are asking what shall they do with their sons?

The trouble comes from two sources. The first is that young men do not determine in time what they will do for a livelihood. This should be settled by the time one is eighteen years of age. Every year after this renders the probability less that the young man will ever have any settled employment. The chances are that he will be a shiftless 'ne'er do well.'

Having chosen your business or trade, pursue it persistently. One feature of American life that strikes foreigners as odd is the readiness with which Americans change their business. If the opportunity comes to better one by a change, then it is time to make the change. But the young man must not give up steady employment for an uncertainty.

If business is looked upon as something merely to bridge over a difficulty, a man need never expect success. Never make what ought to be one's life business a stepping stone The unsettled state of mind that follows will always incapacitate him from doing his best.

All Sorts.

A Texas woman has a pet alligator that wags his tail when his name is called.

Modesty and the dew love the shade. Each shine in the open day only to be exhaled in heaven.

"There are no pockets in a shroud." Certainly not. What would become of lawyers if there were.

Not every one is happy who dances, says the proverb. The man who has just stepped on a tack knows this full well.

We should not always judge from appearances. It is difficult to tell whether the man who says "Amen" fervently is devout or glad that the prayer is ended.

"Doctor," said Mr. Timid, "I am very fond of the water, but I don't want to take cold; what shall I do?" "Don't want to take hold? Then let go. Dollar'n 'alf, please."

Facetious Customer—"I don't think you ought to charge full price for a head like mine; ought to reduce about half." Barber—"No, sah. Couldn't afford, yo' see. Hit's offset on account of having to hunt for de heyar to cut."

Servant—"Boss, dars a man at de doah wid a bill." Mr. Henpeck—"You know Mrs. Henpeck has gone out; she always takes all the money with her. I haven't got a cent." "What shall I tell him, boss?" "Tell him that the boss is not in."

When a Kentuckian sued a doctor for malpractice he didn't suppose the physician could have any defense. He was therefore paralyzed when 22 doctors took the stand and swore they would have set the broken limb just exactly that way.

Boston Hostess—"Did you not think the allegro movement of that concerto by Beethoven most inspiring?" Friend from the West—"Stunning! And wasn't Mr. Beethoven himself perfectly elegant! Such lovely whiskers. I do wish he'd play again!"

THE contention by the National Republican that the Secretary of the Treasury is not authorized to pay a premium on bonds is ingenious, but of doubtful solidity. That the coin paid for duties on imported goods may be applied "to the purchase or payment of 1 per centum of the entire debt of the United States to be made each fiscal year" is unquestioned, but the Republican says: "One who has an election to do one or two things may do either of the two things most advantageous to him having the right to elect."

One Position Open to Him.

"Did you hear about poor Smithers?" asked the Judge.

"No," replied the Major. "What is the matter with him?"

"You know he has been nearly deaf for some time. Well, now he has lost his sight. I don't see what he can do for a living now."

"He might become a Chicago detective"

What James Should Have Said.

"Are you and Johnny Reed not on speaking terms now?" asked the High School Girl of her brother.

"Naw," replied Jim, "we had a fight Monday. He was around yesterday trying to make it up, but I told him to take a short walk."

"O, James, that is such bad slang. Why did you not invite him to take a an abbreviated perambulation?"

FROM July 20 to August 4 sixteen predictions by the weather bureau were accurate; all the rest were so inaccurate had they been the basis of one's action in business affairs they would have led to certain disaster. The comparison is the New York Sun's which paper says: "During the thirty-six days since we began the comparison the predictions have been right eight times and wrong twenty-eight times."

IN Boston the question of the origin of the John Brown song is discussed. It appears to be thought that it originated in the East, whereas it was probably in the West where the song was first sung, and that it underwent a number of changes before it became what it has for years been known. We are of the opinion that the place where the John Brown song originated was nearer Kansas than Boston.

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

At the Wreck.

CHATSWORTH, Ill., August 12.—Rumors were afloat last night that the accident was due to robbers who fired the bridge, but little credence was given them. This morning new facts, apparently showing the catastrophe to be the work of an organized band, came to light, and the company find them worthy of various investigation.

Superintendent Armstrong said to the Associated Press reporter that the more he investigated the more it appeared to him that the bridge had been set on fire. The burned grass in its immediate locality was not of a nature that seemed likely to admit of the bridge's catching fire from it. He observed many thieves at work, and had stopped them while despoiling the wreck of property and money. Instances of the robbing of the dead were being brought to his attention. The excursion had been extensively advertised and the time it would pass over the bridge was well known.

Citizens say that a gang of suspicious fellows have been loitering around Chatsworth for some days. Many of these were found early at the wreck paying more attention to relieving the bodies of their valuables than to caring for them otherwise. Trainmen and passengers had frequent contentions with the vandals. In one instance Superintendent Armstrong found a well-known thief in the depot room where the property taken from the wreck was stored.

At this morning's meeting of the coroner's inquest in the Chatsworth horror some decidedly significant testimony was given.

Timothy Coughlin, the section foreman here, testified that he had four men helping him on his six and one-half miles. He received order on Wednesday to go over his section and see that the bridges and tracks were all right. Coughlin went to the east end of the section and burned the grass along the track for half a mile. He burned a piece a little over half a mile from the wreck and put the fire out. He examined the bridge about 5 o'clock and found no smoke about it, and otherwise it was all right. About three weeks ago the grass under the bridge had been cut away for ten feet from the bridge timbers and he had no idea how the bridge could have caught fire.

Christopher Ennis, the roadmaster for the line from the state line to Peoria, said he went over the road from Fairbury Gilman on Wednesday. He went over the fatal bridge just before 4 o'clock in the afternoon. He was on the rear end of the car and saw that the bridge was all right. There was no fire nor smoke about the bridge. Ennis said: "My opinion is that the bridge was set on fire by somebody. My train was the lost train over before the special, and if there was fire there the men would have discovered it. The bridge could have been burned in two or three hours. About three years ago two attempts were made to ditch the 10 o'clock passenger train at that bridge, and we kept a watchman there for six weeks. Obstructions were piled on the track. It is a very lonesome place and far away from any house."

THE NUMBER OF THE DEAD.

CHATSWORTH, Ill., August 12.—All manner of speculation is heard as to the number of deaths from the railroad disaster. The coroner says he can account for 77 bodies, and believes there are no more in the wreck. The railroad people have agents at work collecting information as to the number and residences of the dead and wounded. Many were taken away from Chatsworth and Piper City early yesterday morning before the extent of their injuries was made known. Some of them have, it is said, died today.

The railroad people say that 87 have already died and 13 more are in a critical condition. It is understood the company will, through its general officers at Peoria, furnish to the public a complete list of the dead, wounded and missing. Unless this is done the general public will never know the full extent of the calamity.

IN BRIEF, AND TO THE POINT

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember:—No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

—We are sorry to hear that Rev. Chas. Steck has severed or is about to sever his connection with the Bellefonte Lutheran congregation as the pastor. This would be great misfortune to the congregation. We happen to know that the pulpit administrations of the reverend gentleman are highly prized by many people who would not go elsewhere to church and perhaps would not attend that church without Rev. Mr. Steck in the pulpit. Then, without question, he is a gentleman of superior talents and learning. He deserves the heartiest support from his congregation and the people of the town generally. We consider Bellefonte highly favored in its Christian ministry. Almost all of them are intellectually above the average, and we dislike to part with any one of them.

Painless Regulation.

It is no longer a question of doubt—although the contrary was once believed—that medicines which produce violent effects are unsuited to other than desperate emergencies. In other words, that super-potent remedies are calculated to weaken and injure the system rather than reform its irregularities. Among medicines of debilitating effect are cathartics and cholagogues which copiously and abruptly evacuate the bowels. Because it does not do this, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is preferable to the drenching class of purgatives. Painless in its effects, it is sufficiently active to remedy chronic constipation. It relieves by invigorating the intestines, and enables, not forces, them to perform the duty imposed upon them by nature. Promoting the secretion of bile in normal quantities by its healthfully stimulating effect upon the liver, it is eminently conducive to digestion, and contributes in no small degree to keep the bowels regular.

An Iowa genius devoted fourteen of the best years of his life to solve the problem of boring a square hole, and finally succeeded. His patents were disposed of to J. F. Curtice, of Fort Wayne, Indiana. Many carpenters, builders, contractors and capitalists have seen it work, and all pronounce it an invention that will meet with universal demand. It is simply an oscillating head with chisel edges and projecting lips which cut the corners in advance of the chisel. The balance of the machine is an almost exact counterpart of the old style boring machine.

GIVE THEM A CHANCE.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, croup, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend on this for certain.

—The Tyrone correspondent of the Altoona Times took occasion on Saturday to ask Capt. C. P. W. Jones, of the Tyrone Daily Herald, a question relative to the disbandment of certain military companies, and then adds, "We pause for a reply." Now, we request Captain Jones not to give an answer to the question, because if the fellow is pausing for a reply his paws should be prolonged. The best parts of his communications are the pauses. So, now that he has shown his paws, let him rest.

I have been for several years a sufferer from hay fever and severe head colds, and have tried other remedies in hope of getting relief but have found none that can compare with Ely's Cream Balm. More Deaths at Chatsworth.

CHATSWORTH, Ill., Aug. 14.—The six wounded, who were in town hall, passed a comfortable night, and part of them decidedly improved, notwithstanding the very heavy thunder storm which lasted till early morning. Mrs. R. H. Clark, of Rootstown, Ohio, whose limbs were amputated yesterday died this evening. Adam Schoenberger, of Peoria, is about the same. The doctor in charge decided that he had better be removed to the Peoria hospital, and he was taken there to-day. Miss Alter, of West Point, Ia., and Dr. Hazen and wife, of Fort Madison, Ia., are improving fast. Dr. Hazen decided to take his wife and Miss Alter home to-day. Mr. Taylor, of Malcolm, is in a critical condition, not having improved since the amputation of his limb yesterday evening. The other wounded around town are improving.

At Piper City about all the wounded are improving, except Mrs. Stillwell, of West Point, Ind., who is in a very dangerous condition with very little hope of recovery. Miss Adams, of Peoria, and Mrs. Streckan, of Syracuse, N. Y., are quite low, but may possibly get well. There have been no deaths at Piper City since yesterday.

The remains of Mrs. H. J. Hicks have not been found. Sunday has passed quietly in this village every one resting after their three days excitement. There are plenty of willing hands to help the remainder of the wounded who are left in the town hall and different private dwellings. None of the churches held service to-day. Almost the last vestige of the wreck was moved to-day.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., August 14.—J. O. Baker, professor of civil engineering in the university of Illinois, has made a careful personal examination of the [illegible] and of other bridges and culverts in the vicinity. He says the incendiary theory has no foundation whatever. That while an attempt has been made to protect the bridges of the road from fire, he found that for several miles along the line of the road the grass and weeds has not all been burned off, and in the immediate vicinity of the burned bridge it was more carelessly done than elsewhere.

Riddleberger goes back to Jail.

WINCHESTER, Va., August 15.—The excitement at Woodstock over the imprisonment and subsequent rescue of Senator Riddleberger has subsided. The court adjourned on Friday until to-day and this morning the senator returned to jail. Shortly after his release by the mob, Senator Riddleberger left town, his whereabouts being known to only a few friends, who finally persuaded him to return and deliver himself up, abide by the law and, if wrongfully imprisoned, seek to have the matter righted through the law.

A Richmond, Va., dispatch says: Judge Newman, of Woodstock, who committed Senator Riddleberger to jail for contempt, is regarded here as one of the spunkiest men in the State. He has been a consistent Democrat for years, and has fought Mahoneism in season and out of season. Those who know the judge well say that he cannot be bulldozed by Riddleberger nor any one else, and he will certainly arrest the senator and put him in jail again.

Governor Fitzhugh Lee was asked by a correspondent what he thought of the Riddleberger incident. "I decline," replied the governor, "to say anything about the matter until I have some official information in regard to it." No doubt seems to be felt among the Richmond lawyers about Judge Newman's having full jurisdiction and authority to commit the senator for contempt.

Failure of the Labrador Fisheries.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., August 15.—The news of the utter failure of the Labrador fisheries, received yesterday, confirms the worst fears of the people. The alarming report is received that 1,000 vessels are coming back clean, and that the remaining 500 craft have only a few quintals of fish each. This is the most disastrous thing that could happen to the fishing colonies here, which depend entirely upon the yield of the ocean for their existence.

Thirty thousand people go from Newfoundland to Labrador every spring to fish. They go down in small craft, whole families, and live a semi-civilized life on hard tack and cod during the summer, each small schooner having from fifteen to twenty men and women indiscriminately mixed together in the most barbarous manner. Fully twenty thousand people are dependent upon the success of those who go there to fish. These people get in debt for their supplies and depend solely upon their season's work to pay for supplies and keep them through the long and bitter winter.

Threatened Indian Revolt.

DENVER, Col., August 13.—Adjutant General West has issued an order for all state militia infantry, cavalry and artillery companies to get ready to move at a moment's notice. He will in case of a serious outbreak of Colorow's renegades order the companies at Montrose and Quray to head off the Utes at Grand Junction. General West left for Glenwood Spri immediately after issuing the order, and it is reported that United States Marshal Hall, who is now at Leadville, will join him at Salida, and, if necessary, order out United States troops to assist the state militia.

No direct information of the Indian troubles has been received since the arrival of a messenger in Glenwood Springs at 3 o'clock Friday morning, but rumors have come in since to the fact that there has been considerable fighting and some casualties. The Aspen militia has been ordered to report to General West at Glenwood Springs, and left here about half-past 1 o'clock, sixty men strong.

A Big Gladstone Victory.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—The election in the Norwich division of Cheshire on Saturday to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. R. Verdin, liberal unionist, resulted in another victory for the Gladstoneites. The vote, which was counted to-day, stood: Mr. J. T. Brunner, Gladstonian, 5,112; Lord Henry Grosvenor, liberal unionist, 3,983. Lord Henry Grosvenor is a son of the Duke of Westminster.

In the last election, when the liberal unionist candidate was successful, the vote being as follows: R. Virdin, liberal unionist, 4,416; J. T. Brunner, home ruler, 3,958.

Lord Grosvenor was backed by all the tremendous prestige and territorial power of the wealthiest family, not only in Cheshire, but in England, in striving to hold the unionist seat which was won last year by the majority given above.

Some Stared Impertinently.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., August 14.—Since the arrival of Mrs. Cleveland at Marion the churches which she has attended have been thronged with people from other places anxious to catch a glimpse of the president's wife. To-day the beautiful weather caused an unusually large influx of visitors from adjoining towns. When Mrs. Cleveland, accompanied by General Greely walked from the latter's residence to St. Gabriel's Episcopal church she was the object of much respectful attention and some impertinent staring. There was a large attendance at the service. Mrs. Cleveland has finally yielded to the frequently expressed and urgent requests and will hold a public reception to-morrow at the residence of General and Mrs. Greely.

Convention Doings.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 17.—The Republican state convention to nominate candidates for supreme judge and state treasurer will be called to order this morning. The nomination of Wm. B Hart for state treasurer appears to be a foregone conclusion, although it is said the friends of Colonel Grimeson will insist that he go before the convention and abide by the decision of that body. Judge Williams, of Tioga, will probably be nominated for supreme judge on the first ballot, and possibly by acclamation. Senator Cooper will be re-elected chairman of the state committee.

The main features of the platform will be the denunciation of the false promises and non-performances of Cleveland's administration in regard to civil service reform; the reiteration of the republican doctrin of protection to American industry and American labor and a demand for the abolition of internal revenue taxes; in favor of subsidies to American shipping and the protection of American commerce; an endorsement of Governor Beaver's administration and of the high license bill; a reaffirmation of the demand for a submission to the people of a constitutional amendment to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors.

It is also highly probable that an endorsement of James G. Blaine as the republican presidential candidate in 1888 will be inserted and adopted without much protest, although there has been some quiet kicking since this fact has been known. The most interesting question involved in the preparation of the platform is over the proposition to request Governor Beaver to call an extra session of the legislature to consider the revenue bill. Several conferences of leaders were held yesterday to consider the matter.

It is understood that the governor is not enthusiastic about calling an extra session. It was, however, determined at a meeting held at the executive office, at which Quay, Magee and others were present, in deference to the demands from the country districts to insert a paragraph in the platform supporting the advisability of calling an extra session in view of the failure of the revenue bill passed at the last session of the legislature. There will be nothing, however, in the declaration which would support a "demand" upon the governor to accede to the wishes of those who are pressing for an extra session.

Representative Robinson of Pittsburgh, has a plank prepared which he wishes to have adopted and which he says reflects the view of Powderly and the Knights of Labor. It urges upon congress the necessity for passing such laws as will effectually restrain, regulate and distribute immigration throughout the country and best secure its interests as well as those of its laboring citizens.

Hold Ferdinand.

VIENNA, Aug. 17.—England, Austria and Italy have sent Turkey an identical note, declaring that they consider the election of Prince Ferdinand legal. It is reported that Turkey's attitude is becoming friendly. The Bulgarian situation now depends entirely upon Russia, who, through the Russian Charge d'Affaires at Constantinople, has handed to the Porte a formal protest against Ferdinand's proceedings, which protest Russia expects Turkey will endorse.

TIRNOVA, Aug. 17.—M. Vulkovitch telegraphs to the Government from Constantinople that the Sultan recognizes Prince Ferdinand's election, but, that as the Prince did not at first obtain the Sultan's consent, the latter will maintain his present attitude for a certain period.

Prime Minister Stoiloff has consented to form a provisinal cabinet. All the officers and soldiers of the garrison here have taken the oath of allegiance to Prince Ferdinand.

Thieving Employes.

PHILADELPHIA, August 17.—For some time past there has been extensive stealing of freight packages on the New York division of the Pennsylvania railroad, and detectives have been working hard to catch the thieves, but until yesterday their efforts have been fruitless. It has transpired, however, that within the past twenty-four hours numerous arrests have been made among the crews of several freight trains, and the arrested employes are now in jail. The investigation and arrests were made with the utmost secrecy, and it is probable that the leaders of an organized gang of car thieves have been captured. More arrests are likely to made to-morrow.

Southern Civilization.

LEXINGTON, Ky,, August 17.—Marshal John Taul, while attempting to arrest Samuel Rottiffe at Mount Sterling this afternoon, was resisted by several of Rottiffe's friends, who drew revolvers and began shooting. Taul at once left the scene of action, and when the smoke had cleared away it was found that the following persons were wounded: Henderson Phipps, flesh wound in the thigh; Joseph Harper, slightly grazed on the stomach; Vigil Glover, flesh wounds on the side, and Aquilla Thomas, seriously and probably fatally wounded in the back. No arrests were made.

Save Us or We Perish.

NEW YORK, August 17.—A resident of Labrador, writing the Herald under date of August 12, says:

"It would be criminal for any Government to endeavor to hide from the outside world the true condition of the people here. If the Arctic winter once more closes in around them, and the ice barrier shuts off for eight months all communication with the outside world before assistance comes, starvation and death are inevitable, and I fear we shall have repeated on a larger scale the story of the Greely expedition."

Fighting Utes.

RAWLINS, W. T., Aug. 17.—A messenger has just arrived from White River, Col., who reports that about 150 Utes are fighting at Beaver Creek, fifteen miles from Meeker. Families are rushing into Meeker, and more Indians are coming: The country is all on fire below Meeker between the White and Bear rivers. Mr. Golden, the messenger, is trustworthy. One hundred mounted men are ready here, and will march on the Utes. Women are making bandages and the town is thoroughly excited.

Briefs.

PHILADELPHIA, August 17.—General Sheridan has addressed a letter to General Hartranft in reference to the National Guard of Pennsylvania, in which he commends the advance in proficiency of the troops, and says. "The purely military idea on which the encampment was conducted; the methods by which the troops were fed; the cleanliness of the different camps and the soldierly bearing of the officers and men in line and on review, plainly showed me that you have under your command a body of troops available for active service the moment they are supplied with ammunition and rations, for such experiences as they have undergone at Gettysburg and Mount Gretna have taught them the important lesson of caring for themselves on the field."

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Aug. 15.—W. P. Snyder, of Middletown, a survivor of the Chatsworth disaster, passed through the city to-day. He was an occupant of the third car of the fatal train, but escaped with a few bruises. He said to an Associate Press reporter that the stories of robbing passengers was greatly exaggerated, but few attempts at robbery having been made. No one at the scene of the accident, he said, seriously believed that the bridge had been set on fire by incendiaries, railroaders especially scouting the idea. Snyder's hands show the effect of digging in the earth in working to extinguish the flames.

OMAHA, Neb., August 15.—General Crook the commander of the department of the Platte, says: "If it is true that Utes have broken out it will not be a matter simply of a day to put them down. They are armed with the most improved rifles, and the roughness of their country is such that they can safely defy any army to dislodge them. Besides, the Utes are on friendly terms with the Mormons, and it is a known fact that in the event of war they would receive assistance from their polygamous neighbors."

WASHINGTON, August 16.—Secretary Fairchild was to-day informed that requisitions will be made in a few days for $16,000,000 to pay pensions during the present month. These payments will overbalance by $2,000,000 the present excess of $14,000,000 of the receipts over the expenditures.

INDIANAPOLIS, August 15.—While playing near a cornfield last evening some boys found the decomposed body of a man. The body was identified by Mrs. Lukes, living in the neighborhood, as that of her husband. A week ago he left home, after they had quarreled, threatening never to return. It is supposed he committed suicide, as on his person was found a bottle containing arsenic.

COLUMBUS, S. C., Aug. 15.—Will Montgomery, a negro boy, 8 years old, living in Lancaster county, yesterday shot and instantly killed Alice Hury, a colored playmate, aged 12, and seriously wounded his sister Lizzie, about the same age, with a shot gun. He claims that it was an accident, but the circumstances point to wilful murder.

NEW YORK, August 15.—John Joyce, the well-known highwayman, was today sentenced to twenty-four years and nine months in state prison at hard labor. Immediately after sentence was passed on Joyce his counsel went before Judge Donohue and obtained a stay of proceeding pending an appeal to a higher court.

CHICAGO, Aug. 14.—Senator Don Cameron, accompanied by ex-Governor Samuel T. Houser, of Helena, arrived here tfi-day on their return from a trip to Alaska. Senator Cameron went east on the afternoon train, having been hastily summoned to Beverly Farm, Mass., where his daughter lies very ill.

SUNBURY, Pa., August 14.—The republican primaries were held last night and the returns indicate the nomination of J. C. Kramer for sheriff, Jno J. Schwartz, for prothonotary, Jacob Kremer for treasurer. The delegates to the state convention will be for Williams and Hart.

AUGUSTA, Me., August 15.—Two hundred weavers in Edwards mill struck this morning for higher pay. Dissatisfaction has been manifest for several weeks, growing out of the ten-hour law, which reduced the pay of piece workers by shortening the time.

PHILADELPHIA, August 17.—President Roberts, of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, is at the Thousand Islands, and Stephen A. Caldwell, President of the Fidelity Trust Company is visiting relatives in Massachusetts.

CHICAGO, August 14.—Last Thursday Frank Byran, Fred Evans and Thomas Collins, three young men, went yachting on the lake. They have not since been heard from and it is believed they have been lost.

LOUISVILLE, August 15.—Ex-Governor Luke H. Blackburn, who has been dangerously ill at Frankfort Ky., for some weeks, is rapidly sinking and his death may be expected at any moment.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 15.—The steamer Lord Clive, at this port, spoke the yacht Thistle yesterday morning. All were well on board. The yacht should reach New York to-morrow morning.

LOUISVILLE, August 17.—Official returns from the recent Kentucky election give Buckner, democrat, 17,015 plurality over Bradley, republican.

NEWPORT, Aug. 15.—The yacht race today was won by the Volunteer beating the Puritan 12 minutes. The Mayflower was third.

Not Dead.

The Lancaster Intelligencer of Monday says: Many will remember the eloquent colored minister Rev. J. H. Hector, of York, who made addresses here. He was transferred from York to California and it was stated recently that while en route with his family, the steamer in which they had taken passage blew up, killing Rev. Mr. Hector and the entire family. The rumor is exploded. B. F. Landis, of York, has received a letter from Rev. Mr. Hector from San Francisco by which he learns that that reverend gentleman is all right.

—J. J. Lucas has not written a new advertisement for several days, he says he is so busy receiving and sending out goods that he has not got the time. His sales have increased from five dollars a day to thirty dollars a day since he commenced his talks to the public through this paper, and as he has no clerk he is kept so busy he has not time to think, as soon, however, as he get things in shape he will again have a little conversation through the medium of the press with his patrons and the public generally.

Painless Regulation.

It is no longer a question of doubt—although the contrary was once believed—that medicines which produce violent effects are unsuited to other than desperate emergencies. In other words, that super-potent remedies are calculated to weaken and injure the system rather than reform its irregularities. Among medicines of debilitating effect are cathartics and cholagogues which copiously and abruptly evacuate the bowels. Because it does not do this, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is preferable to the drenching class of purgatives. Painless in its effects, it is sufficiently active to remedy chronic constipation. It relieves by invigorating the intestines, and enables, not forces, them to perform the duty imposed upon them by nature. Promoting the secretion of bile in normal quantities by its healthfully stimulating effect upon the liver, it is eminently conducive to digestion, and contributes in no small degree to keep the bowels regular.

Dr. Gale on Diseases of the Kidneys.

Dr. Gale observes in his treatise on disease that the great use of wine in France is supposed to have abated the prevalence of the gravel.

In some parts of the country where Speer's Port Grape Wine is principally used, not only the gout, but the gravel is scarcely known. Dr. La Pota relates as an extraordinary instance of the effects of Speer's Port Wine on gout, the cure of Dr. Daveran, who was attacked with it at the age of twenty-five, and had it severely till he was upwards of fifty, with chalk stones in the joints of his hands and feet, but for four years preceeding the time when his case had been given to Dr. La Pota to lay before the public had by advice used Speer's Port Grape Wine, and had no return of the gout afterwards.—London Post.

Discipline at Camp.

WHEREIN SOME LITTLENESS WAS SHOWN IN BIG (?) THINGS.

MR. EDITOR:—At home once more! And oh what joy to breathe again the atmosphere of reasonable liberty and justice! The grandeur of the camp as it extended far and wide, girted on all sides by the mrssy green bulwark of the Alleghenies, and beautified here and there by natural parks and artificial lakes, or little valleys enclosed by gently sloping hills has been as accurately and beautifully depicted by the press as the power of language could have permitted. But who would presume to give a true portrayal of such a beautiful picture as Mt. Gretna presented during the recent encampment? Human language could never do it justice. To the visitor, the view of the camp and its surroundings must have been indescribably superb. The apparent success of every endeavor in the management of the 8,000 soldiers and the seeming unanimity of feeling that possessed the majority of that immense army must have impressed the looker on with the wonderful managing ability and the powerful influence of man over man. Fifteen regiments of infantry, three batteries of artillery and two troops of cavalry all moving at one given command—who could fail to regard in awe and wonder such a glittering spectacle!

But "All is not gold that glitters." We can not always judge by external appearances. For while the encampment from a general stand point was as grand, as successful, and as free from criticism as probably could have been expected, considering the various classes and conditions of men that constituted that military body, yet in the individual management of some regiments there were certain principles of right, justice and propriety disregarded by the superior commanders of those regiments to a deplorable degree: And no regiment suffered more from, or was more dissatisfied with such unprincipled management, than the members of the gallant Fifth.

During the past years the Fifth has held a high position in the National Guard for its good order in camp, its large attendance and soldierly bearing in parades, and the ever excellent appearance of its members and equipments, wherever they might be. And what was the reason? Simply the fact that its competent and esteemed colonel during those years, Adj. Gen. Hastings, was a man like the rest. He possibly had been a private or a subordinate officer himself once, and therefore know how to sympathize with the wants and desires of those under his authority as Colonel. He ruled not with the rod of a tyrant or a misanthrope, but with that of friendship, and praise for every good move effected by his men. And yet his discipline was sufficiently rigid to have his regiment maintain an irreproachable reputation in all the points that characterize good soldiers. By such wise and politic discipline the Fifth regiment was raised to a high standing in the division of the militia, notwithstanding the malicious and scurrilous attacks to the contrary that have been made recently in the Altoona Times and other smaller papers that are ever ready to backguard anybody. This reg't and the Colonel who made it what it is to-day sustain too good a reputation to be injured by such mud slinging. There are three principles that should be respected in the management of any body of men: Equal rights to one and all; sympathy between ruler and ruled; and a cooperative spirit that tends to interest the subject in the purposes of the commander. The recently elected Colonel of the Fifth utterly disregarded all of these principles; and what is the result? The members of the regiment have returned home feeling that unless a man of more philanthropic and human characteristics is chosen to take the place of Col. Burchfield, ere another encampment will have come around the better portion of the regiment will be in mutiny or will have resigned, thereby almost irremediably counteracting the competent and excellent work of the past Commander. When a Colonel cooly and deliberately grants "passes" to one set of men and refuses them to another, especially when other colonels all through the division are granting precisely the same much prized privilege to all their men; When a colonel passes about among his men without deigning to notice them, and when by force of necessity the latter seek privileges from him and receive nothing save harsh and surly replies; When he publicly reprimands an officer, who is reputed to be as competent and as faithful a Lieutenant as there is in the entire division, for that for which he himself is culpable (for had the Colonel treated the men of a certain company honorably and justly, they would have been present on a certain parade and saved any such unjustifiable rebuke as the Colonel administered). In short, when a commanding officer makes himself a modern Critias with no sympathy for officer or private, and ever reminds the observer of one as cold and heartless as a marble slab—then it is high time for the regiment to demand his speedy resignation. For except the men of the Fifth have a man in command whom they could delight to honor, and for whose interest they would desire to labor, the standing that it has maintained in the past and even the regiment itself will pass into oblivion. Give us a new Colonel or disband us.

MILITARIS JUSTITIA.

Some Important Work Done.

The council met on Monday evening, a goodly representation of the members being present, Chairman Hillibish in the chair. The usual signing bills and reading the minutes preceded the business. The Street committee reported that notice to erect sidewalks or pavements had been served on residents of Linn street, two persons on Bishop street and also on the south and north sides of the jail.

The Water Committee reported a request for a hydrant on Howard street. It was not granted.

The Fire and Police Committee reported the completion of the Undine hose house and that there was some dissatisfaction on the part of the citizens relative to the organization of the company. A committee consisting of Messrs. Cole, Hepburn and Brew was appointed to confer with the citizens and the company and learn their actual grievances.

The market committee reported $22.10 fees.

The finance report showed that $4,311.-04 is now due the borough treasurer.

D. F. Fortney, Esq., of the school board appeared before the council and stated the needs of the schools in reference to the borough. The children living in the vicinity of Reynolds' mill must go to the new school house and will find their most convenient way to travel up the Burnt Mills road to Logan street, thence along Logan street to the school house. He requested that sidewalks be laid along one side of Logan street extension and a crossing there if the walk is built on the south side; also a crossing on Bishop street in front of the school house. In reference to the laying of the walks the Street committee was directed to proceed according to ordinance. The request for a crossing on Bishop street will be investigated.

A Specimen of Malicious Mischief.

One morning last week some one adopted a very questionable method of having sport, and one which might involve serious consequences. At a place on the Buffalo Run railroad, near a curve, they placed the figure of a man upon the track, his hat on his head and his head resting on one arm. When Jerry Nolan, the engineer, saw the figure on the track his heart leaped up into his mouth. The fast-moving locomotive was almost on the prostrate figure. Quickly, he reversed the engine, the stop being so sudden that the passengers were disagreeably shaken. He went forward to rescue the drunken man or would-be suicide from the rail and found it only a stuffed figure!

It wouldn't be well for the author of this deception to become known. While we don't object to fun we consider a joke of this kind very foolish and wrong. Suppose some one's nose had been broken by coming in contact with the seat in front, when the cars stopped so suddenly?

—The 11-month-old infant son of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Seibert, of Lamb St., died on Monday night. The baby was a bright and beautiful child, apparently, until two weeks ago, enjoying excellent health, and possessing a winsome, intelligent countenance. The attachment and devotion of the parents was centred upon it. That summer scourge of infancy, cholera infantum, attacked it. Apparently, it became better, but a relapse which began on Monday ended in death at the time mentioned. Mr. and Mrs. Seibert have our earnest condolence in this hour of their very great affliction. This lovely bud which gave promise of such bright development has been transplanted into the gardens of Paradise to be cared for and nurtured by a Heavenly Gardener. May they find peace and consolation in the assurance that their baby boy is with Him who took infants in His arms and blessed them. Funeral at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

—D. F. Fortney, Esq., impresses us as being a very useful citizen from the fact that he is earnest in the discharge of duty whether for the borough or for himself. He spends a great deal of time in work which belongs to his position in the school board and in it displays energy and wisdom. We believe that if the school board and the borough council were entirely composed of such men as Mr. Fortney the educational facilities of our town would be better than they are now, teachers would be well paid, boardwalks would be erected, perhaps the cows would be closed in pasture and our town would be neat and clean.

—There is a story that a Canadian cruiser has fired into an American fishing schooner sinking the craft and drowning all on board. If this be true it may lead to a very delicate and strained condition of affairs. We expect nothing else but that our Northern neighbors will fool about until they get hurt.

—A great number of Democrats in the county insist that the late Democratic convention violated all precedent and the rules of the party by nominating A. J. Griest for a third term for commissioner. It is a little strange that he is the only good business man in the party.

Inspecting a Large Vineyard

MR. SPEER ENTERTAINS A PARTY AT HIS HOME IN PASSAIC.

Alfred Speer, the well-known wine maker of Passaic, N. J., entertained a small party, including members of the New York Board of Health and prominent physicians, at his vineyard and wine cellar Saturday. The party consisted of Dr. Cyrus Edson, Dr. Edward H. James, assistant sanitary superintendent; Dr. A. M. Jacobus, Dr. Charles S. Wood, George Wood, Clerk of the Court of Special Sessions; Miss Daisy Wood and a Tribune reporter. Mr. Speer was waiting at the Passaic station with carriages, and the party was driven to the vineyard and through it among the vines. There is more than two miles of road under grape arbors, and the bunches that hang thick along the sides and overhead give promise of a beautiful sight when the grapes are ripe. Mr. Speer's vineyards cover fifty-six acres. The vines are trained on wires, stretched one above another eighteen inches apart, to a height of five wires, and there are more than 300 miles of wire used in this way. The leading varieties of grapes raised are the Concord and the Oporto. The original vines of the latter Mr. Speer imported, about thirty-two years ago, from the banks of the Doura, in Portugal. There was much difficulty at first in acclimating the vines, and out of 5,000 imported only 800 lived. These Mr. Speer cultivated, and he estimates that he has now from 40,000 to 50,000.

After leaving the vineyard the party visited the wine cellars, where the wines, some of last year's vintage and some so old that Mr. Speer himself had forgotten what they were, lay in every size of receptacle from the pint bottle to the 1,000 gallon tun. Here Mr. Speer showed his process, discovered two years ago, for preventing the fermentation of grape juice. Mr. Speer has succeeded, he claims, in killing the germs of fermentation altogether by passing a current of electricity through the juice. Fumigated casks are still used, and the wires conducting the current are attached to nails driven through the heads of the casks. Dr. Wood, who has visited the vineyards of California, said that there were no wines that physicians could recommend with more confidence than Speer's port wine, and all the doctors agreed that this and the other varieties were of the highest purity and excellence. Mr. Speer makes port, claret, unfermented juice, Burgundy and grape brandy, the quantities ranking in the order named.

After a substantial supper served in Mr. Speer's little private park, the party from New York returned highly pleased with everything it had seen.

Painful Accident to Dr. VanValin.

About eight weeks ago Dr. W. C. VanValin of Unionville met with a serious and painful accident which has confined him to the house ever since. It happened in this way he was at Karthaus Clearfield, Co, and came across the river to Hoovers Mill about a mile on this side. Returning to Karthaus a few hours later he accepted an invitation to ride on a wagon loaded with boards which was to go to the railroad station going down hill towards the river he concluded to walk as the road was rough and the vehicle springless and so jumped off just as the wagon was going over a water bar in the road. The horses were walking fast he was thrown off his ballance and fell striking his left foot against a stone forcing his ankle joint out of place He quickly loosened his shoe and, removing it, pulled his ankle joint back into the socket—a painful operation, as we may well judge, but not one that an old soldier like the Doctor would hesitate to do. He has faced trouble and wounds before, and is prompt to act in such emergencies, when a thing has to be done. Two men lifted him into the wagon, and he was taken to the hotel where he had to remain three days before he was able to take the journey to Snow Shoe in the stage, and from there to his home in the cars. The Doctor says that "in all his four years service in the army he never experienced anything so painful." Now eight weeks after the accident he is still unable to walk, and no one can tell how long it will be before he will able to get around again. His many friends sympathise with him in his trouble and trust that he may soon be as well as ever.

Independent Candidate for Register.

Knowing as I do the great growth and tendency to political union of the movement among the farmers, soldiers and workingmen for some needed reforms in our industrial and financial policy, I have decided to present my name to the citizens of Centre county for the office of Register, thereby giving all citizens an opportunity to express themselves on the subject, and respectfully ask their support in aid of these reforms.

Endorsed by the M. D's.

A. M. Robinson, Druggist and Apothecary, Bangor, Me., in a letter dated July 1, 1884, says:—"I have had many prescriptions for Gilmore's Aromatic Wine from one of our best physicians, who learned of its virtues from those who had used it." No remedy ever produced has met with such marked favor from the medical profession. The Company cheerfully furnish any physician a sample of their Aromatic Wine, and not one of the many hundreds who have given it an examination has ever failed to endorse it as a valuable remedy.—All over the country leading physicians are prescribing it, particularly for the numerous ailments to which females are liable. They know there is no purer, safer, or more reliable remedy.

Billiousness and Sick Headache are cured by the delightful preparation known as Tarrant's Seltzer Aperient. There is not a drug store from the Atlantic to the Pacific nor from the Lakes to the Gulf that does not keep a large stock of this old and valuable medicine. A journey should never be undertaken without a bottle being carried in one's valise. In fact it ought to be in the house of those who don't travel, for time and experience have proved it to be one of the most valuable family remedies extant. The head office is in N. Y. City.—N. O. Picayune.

The agonies of those who suffer from severe salt rheum are indescribable. The cleansing, healing, purifying influences of Hood's Sarsaparilla are unequalled by any other medicine.

"I take pleasure in recommending Hood's Sarsaparilla, for it has done wonders for me. I had salt rheum very severely, affecting me over nearly my entire body. Only those who have suffered from this disease in its worst form can imagine the extent of my affliction. I tried many medicines, but failed to receive benefit until I took Hood's Sarsaparilla. Then the disease began to subside, the disappeared, and now I am entirely free from the disease. My blood seems to be thoroughly purified, and my general health is greatly benefited." LYMAN ALLEN, Sexton N. E. Church, North Chicago, Ill.

"My son had salt rheum on his hands and the calves of his legs, so bad that they would crack open and bleed. He took Hood's Sarsaparilla and is entirely cured." J. B. STANTON, Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

Parched Lands.

CHICAGO, August 10.—The telegraph wires crossing and recrossing the vast area of country that has been parching and blackening for lack of rain, brought only news of despair this morning. Messages received from all the different sections showed the outlook even worse than 24 hours before Then there was word of a slight sprinkling at Des Moines and faint hopes were entertained for a few drops in places elsewhere. To-day's telegrams contain the information that not a particle of the longed-for rain has descended in all the immense stretch of territory. Added to this the temperature throughout the drouth region is rising, and the expectation of slight showers is gradually being reduced to a minimum.

A dispatch from Detroit, Mich., says: A gentleman who traveled yesterday through the burning "thumb" of the lower peninsula says meadow and bush fires are everywhere. Acres of cut grain and miles of fencing have been destroyed. Several barns and a number of cattle are reported burned in the interior, but definite news has not yet been received. At night the scene is wild and wierd. Isolated houses stand in the centre of burning fields and their destruction seems certain. Last week Bad Axe seemed doomed, but a sudden change of wind drove the fire away. The farmers are suffering greatly.

At the Straits of Mackinac the smoke is so dense that much trouble is experienced by vessel men in making the passage. In many parts of the state the fires are small and scattered, but the total loss will be heavy. Forest fires are raging two miles south of Belleville, and many acres of timber have already been destroyed.

Milk Famine Probable.

ELGIN, Ill., August 10.—A newspaper man who has just completed a tour of this (Kane) county, reports that he found everywhere evidences of a rapidly coming milk famine, the result of the great drouth. The seriousness of a milk famine can be inferred from the fact that one milk train which reaches Chicago at 10 a. m. carries from this county daily upward of twenty car loads of 250 cans each, eight gallons to the can. Already pasturage is dead above the ground, and unless there is rain within two weeks the roots will be dry and reseeding will be necessary. Around Elgin nothing green is left except leaves on trees, and they are falling. Mr. Pembleton of the St. Charles creamery, the largest in the county, says that he has dropped from his ordinary daily receipts of 85,000 to 65,000 pounds of milk.

Said Mr. Lake, a leading dairyman of Wascoe: "The supply of milk under existing circumstances is rapidly lessening and will so continue until rain comes. If Chicago dealers come to the rescue by advancing prices over contract rates dairymen will be able to purchase feed from other states and thus increase again the milk supply. I am preparing to ship in feed for my cattle from Iowa. We can have shelled corn delivered from there at 38 cents, oats at 30 cents, bran $13 and and middlings $14. Milk suppliers who have the cash will adopt this plan. Those who have not will feed from local purchases as long as possible and then sell their cattle, as many of the poorer ones have already done. You are not probably aware that this means absolute want. Hundreds of farmers in this country have no income except from milk sales. They raise no grain save such as is used in caring for the cows. The sell no butter, but turn everything into milk. A short continuation of this drought, then, means to them want and hunger."

Came Down Amid Cheers.

NEW YORK, August 10.—Yesterday afternoon, at Cockaway, Thomas Sackett Baldwin went up in a balloon, taking a parachute along, and when at a height of 1,200 feet he climbed over the edge of the basket, grabbed the ring of his parachute, and with a quick stroke of a knife set it free. Down it plunged without catching the air. It looked as if Mr Baldwin was a doomed man, when in an instant the sides of the parachute flied out, the craft swayed easily from side to side, and then floated eastward gently as a falling apple blossom. She swayed a little, though, and Baldwin swung in pendulum-fashion until he reached this world on a sand flat in Jamaica bay, about a thousand yards from where he started. It took him one minute and forty-two seconds to make the descent. Standing knee-deep in the water, he waved his handkerchief again, which inspired the thousands to do great deal of cheering.

Camp Hancock Flooded.

MOUNT GRETNA, August 11.—The National Guard encampment was caught in a huge this afternoon and the grand review of troops by Governor Beaver had to be postponed until to-morrow morning. Twenty-five thousand people gathered to witness the review. The first brigade had passed the reviewing stand when the storm struck the camp, and after getting thoroughly drenched the were sent back and there was a general scampering of the spectators. General Sheridan arrived late to-night and was warmly greeted. To-night it is quite cold.

Through a Burning Bridge.

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—The Chicago Times' special from Forest, Ill., says: All the railway horrors in the history of this country were surpassed three miles east of Chatsworth last night when an excursion train on the Toledo, Peoria and Western road dropped through a burning bridge and over 100 people were killed and four times that number were more or less badly injured. The train was composed of six sleeping cars, six day coaches and chair cars and three baggage. It was carrying 960 passengers, all excursionists, and was bound for Niagara Falls. The train had been made up all along the line of the Toledo, Peoria and Western road, and the excursionists hailed from various points in Central Illinois, the bulk of them, however, coming from Peoria. Some of the passengers came from Canton, Elpaso, Washington and, in fact, all stations along the line, some from as far west as Burlington and Keokuk, Iowa. A special and cheap rate had been made for the excursion and all sorts of people took advantage of it.

When the train drew out of Peoria at 8 o'clock last evening it was loaded to its utmost capacity. Every berth in the six sleepers was taken and the day cars carried sixty people each. The train was so heavy that two engines were required to haul it. Three miles east of Chatsworth is a little slough where the railroad crosses a dry run, about ten feet deep and fifteen feet wide. Over this was stretched an ordinary wooden trestle bridge, and as the excursion train came thundering down to it the first engineer was horrified at seeing that this bridge was afire. There was no chance to stop. The first engine passed over in safety, but the bridge broke under the great weight and the second engine and cars crashed through with their human freight. The cars were piled on top of one another in great confusion. On top of the engine were three baggage cars, and crashing into them came six coaches. Only the six sleeping cars escaped. Every passenger in the front car was lying dead or dying, and of those in the second car but four people came out alive. The third car lay on top of the second with many victims inside.

The other three cars were not so badly crushed but many of the occupants were killed or maimed by broken and twisted seats and timbers. Instantly the air was filled with cries of the wounded and the shrieks of the dying. There was another danger yet to be met. The bridge was still burning and the flames lapped over and around the wrecked cars and to fight the fire there was not a drop of water and only some fifty able-bodied men who had escaped unhurt to assist in putting out the fire and helping the injured and dying. Earth was the only weapon to fight the fire with and for four hours the fifty men fought like fiends to crush the fire with handfuls of earth. The accident occurred a few minutes before midnight and at nearly four o'clock the victory was won and the fire put out just before the sun rose on a scene of horror. Help then began to arrive from neighboring towns and the work of removing the victims from the wreck proceeded more rapidly.

Pittsburg's Peril.

PITTSBURG, July 12.—Fire broke out at 10 o'clock to-night in the Penny Press building and that building, the Masonic temple and the Hamilton building adjoining the Dispatch office, were quickly in flames. A general alarm for the firemen was sent out. At 11.40 p. m. the fire was still spreading, with no indications of the fire department getting the flames under control. The buildings are the costliest in the city and the loss will undoubtedly be very heavy. Schmidt & Friday's nine-story buildings are in danger. The printers in the Dispatch office have deserted their cases.

MIDNIGHT.—The buildings mentioned, including the Dispatch building are burning fiercely and there are no indications of the fire being controlled. It is feared that half the block on the north side of Fifth avenue between Smithfield and Wood streets, is doomed. A number of tenement houses in the rear of Masonic hall have been destroyed and twelve families rendered homeless. So far no causalties have been reported.

PITTSBURG, August 13.—At 2.30 a. m. the flames are under control, but the fire is not extinguished. The Hamilton building, Masonic hall and a number of tenement houses are totally destroyed. Schmidt & Friday's building will be ruined. The Dispatch building was on fire several times, but saved from destruction. The entire structure is watersoaked and no paper will be issued Saturday morning. The total loss is estimated at $1,000,000.

A Failure for $20,000,000

NEW YORK, August 11.—The firm of Henry S. Ives & Co. notified the Stock Exchange just before closing of its suspension. There was intense excitement as soon as the announcement was received. It is stated that the liabilities are about $20,000,000, with assets somewhat in excess of that amount.

When the notice of suspension was read, there was a dead silence for a moment, and then came the utterly unprecedented case of the brokers giving three cheers at the news of the suspension of a fellow-member. It is said the liabilities of the firm will exceed twenty million dollars.

Flouring Mill Improvements.

IMPORTANT CHANGES COMPLETED AT THE ESTABLISHMENT OF GERBERICH, HALE & CO.

Through the courtesy of Dr. E. W. Hale and Mr. C. T. Gerberich, on Wednesday, we had the pleasure of a close inspection of their new flouring mill, which we believe is now the largest, most valuable and best equipped in Centre county. All of the summer months have been occupied in removing the old machinery, remodeling the mill, and substituting new and improved roller mill apparatus. During this time the business office has been in the ware house. We suppose it will remain there for some time yet as a very important improvement is still in progress, in the erection of a stone addition in the rear of the mill, two stories in height, the lower or basement floor of which will be used for a storing room and the upper room as a business office.

From the business office a door will be made to communicate with the mill proper. This leaves all the space inside the mill to be utilized in the process of manufacturing the best quality of roller flour. Of course, all these improvements, including every apartment from basement to cupola filled with costly machinery, have been made at great cost. They were completed in time for active operations to begin last Tuesday morning.

Dr. Hale showed us the first or basement floor where, just inside the entrance, the product of the new roller make chopper located on the floor above, is falling, swiftly, silently and in large quantity. This chop, made of corn and oats, has superior qualities for feed which we will refer to in a separate notice. Its capacity is 40 bushels per hour. Attachments extend down from the room above which we are informed are for the purpose of tightening the belts in the pulleys which can thus be done without any danger.

After reaching the second floor the Doctor introduced us to Mr. William Trump, Jr., who came here a few days ago from the Buffalo Flouring Mills in Lewisburg to take charge of the mechanical work in this great industry. He is an experienced miller and in conversation informed us that he really learned his trade three times, being acquainted with all the different processes for manufacturing flour. Much of the perfection and good arrangement of the mill are due to Mr. John G. Beard, the millwright, who has superintended the remodeling and equipment of this establishment. Along the southern side of the second floor room of the mill, to which entrance is made from the street, are located twelve sets of the famous Stevens roller mills in six large handsome frames which are attractive in appearance. In the one nearest the entrance the operation of reducing the wheat is begun. In the technical language of the trade, the wheat goes to the first break and thence to the aspirator; that of the second break to a scalping reel; and those of the third, fourth and fifth breaks, each going to a scalping reel Each of these processes, we believe, accomplishes a successive reduction of the grain. No. 6 which is the bran roll, also goes to a scalper. In the reverse sides of these cabinets the reduction of middlings is in progress. Mr. Trump says that this arrangement of the reduction of the grain all on one side and of the middlings on the other is an improvement on any flouring mill he has seen.

The third floor is the purifying apartment. Here are located 3 No. 0 Geo. T. Smith's purifiers, where the material is freed from all impurities of any description. Also two Oriole gravity separators, three No. 2 Prenz dust collectors, one No. 4 Richmond's Empire Conical bran dusters and bolts. We believe that it is on this floor that two Silver Creek flour packers are located. They have all the necessary tube attachments.

The room on the fourth floor is scientifically denominated the centrifugal room. There may be found eight No. 3 Geo. T. Smith's centrifugal flour dressing machines; also a one-sixth reel scalping chest, manufactured by John T. Noye, of Buffalo, N. Y. where by the way, much of the other machinery in the mill is made. An interesting machine is an automatic Stevens grain scale containing five bushels at a time and automatically dumps the grain over the rolls. It registers automatically and on Saturday night the exact amount of grain passing through it during the week may be accurately ascertained. There are flour packers and bran bins for fine and coarse bran. We did not obtain their dimensions, but their capacity is at least ten tons each. There are four improved bolting chests and a single bolting chest used as a feed grader.

The conveyor, from the elevator to the mill, is, we believe, about seventy feet in length. The grain passes through the most thorough refining processes before it is introduced to the roller machines. The process must be of great interest especially to any one interested in milling. Of course, however, unaccustomed as we are to work of this kind, our description is necessarily imperfect. The capacity of the mill is about 125 barrels per day.

—Mr. William Hillibush informs us that on Saturday, the 20th, the second day of the festival to be held by the Logan Hose Company, there will be a firemen's parade in which the Undines and Coronets will participate. He also informs us that it is not the intention of the Logans to solicit donations from the citizens, but so far as possible, will provide all that is required. Anyone who feels disposed to contribute cream, fruits, cakes or other such festival accessories will please notify some member of the company and the donation will be called for.

—The Logan Hose Company will hold a festival on Friday and Saturday evenings of this week, which will be the 19th and 20th. It will be held either in the public school grounds or in the Court House yard—quite probably in the latter. We are glad that the Logans are to have this festival as it will give all our people an opportunity to express their high appreciation of the company and its members. The town owes more to the Logans than it does to all the other merely secular organizations combined. All who remember the thrilling and dangerous scenes of last winter when on two or three occasions devouring flames were driven back by the members of this company, at their own desperate peril, will agree that a hearty recognition of such services should be given. It is a wonder that a spontaneous, public testimonial has not ere this been bestowed upon them. But they so seldom come before the public for assistance that the propriety of this seems to have entirely escaped attention. Of course, the heartiest encouragement will be given them both in preparation for and patronage of the forthcoming festival, and may the benignant "Old Probabilties" vouchsafe delightful weather.

How It Happened.

On the first day of this month an accident occurred along the line of the Lemont railroad. This paper at the time said that it occurred at Dale's crossing. Mr. Robert F. Blair, of Unionville, who was in Bellefonte on Thursday, informed us that the accident was at Grove's crossing, which is nearer Lemont. Mr. Blair, whose son, David Blair, was injured by being thrown from the conveyance in which he and others were riding, is justly indignant at the unnecessary manner in which the horse was frightened, causing the accident to occur. The crossing, he informs us, is near a curve in the railroad. The lady who was driving was aware that is was time for the train, but heard no whistle at the proper time. He says that the wagon was entirely across the railroad when the whistle blew. The horse was frightened by it and ran. The results might have been more serious than they were. Very great care should be taken by persons connected with the railroad to ensure the safety of those who may have to cross their track.

Sixty Bushels Per Hour.

The roller chopper which is turning out forty bushels of corn and oats chop daily at Gerberich, Hale & Co's mill can be forced up to sixty bushels per day if necessary. Mr. Trump, the miller, was particularly earnest when he was explaining to us the superior quality of the feed which it produces. He took from the chopper handfuls of three successive reductions of the corn and oats which this chopper produces. The finest state of it is not near so fine as farmers sometimes think must be fed to animals, but he says it is all the better because it is not so fine. The chemical mode of making this feed, he says, renders it superior. In the old method more pressure was required and the chop necessarily absorbs more heat. It often cakes in the stomach of the animals. An instance of the sudden death of two fine horses belonging to the Beaver Mills, in Williamsport, was related in proof of what he said. This chop, however, is free from such dangers.

—In regard to the progress being made toward the arrest of the murderers of Mr. and Mrs. Culvey, of Clinton county, the Lock Haven Daily Democrat contains the following: "A man by the name of Johnson, who lives near Hublersburg, Centre county, and who is reported to have said that he had a grudge against Culvey and would take it out of him some day, has probably been arrested by this time, as a warrant was issued by Alderman Harris, of this city, for his apprehension, and Sheriff May and Constable Myers are after him. William Kline, a brother of James Kline, now in jail here, is also to be arrested, and Chief Westbrook is on his track. Deputy Sheriff Wensel started out this forenoon on the hunt for Essec Kline, another brother of the one in jail. Essec is said to be simple-minded."

Letter List.

Following is a complete list of the letters remaining uncalled for in the post-office at Bellefonte, Centre county, Penn'a, August 8, 1887:

Mrs J H Booth, Miss Cora E Dubbs, Miss Jennie E Gardner, Miss Mary Ganes, Miss Lidie Hughes, H W Long, Mrs Annie W Miller, William Hartley Miller, George B Noacker-2, William Speering, Benjamin Smith, John Whitehead, Jacob E Wilson, James Young.

Persons inquiring for letters named in the above list will please say advertised.

—The commissioners of Clinton county offer $500 reward for the arrest of the murderers of Mr. and Mrs. Culvey.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

THE CROPS AND THE PEOPLE WHO GATHER THEM—ACCIDENTS, IMPROVEMENTS, PERSONAL NOTES, ETC.

Many of the farmers are just putting the last of their hay away. Mr. Joseph Gates, of Dick's Run, finished his this week and his barn is so full that the quantity of hay tested its greatest capacity. It is evident that he will soon have to build a new barn in order to make room for such a large supply. He erected a new dwelling house this summer and has his home arrangements very tasteful and pleasant. We are sorry to know that he was decidedly unfortunate a week or so ago. He went to the field to cut some oats and had not worked longer than a half hour when he struck his knee against the cradle, which rendered him unable to work for at least a week thereafter. Mr. Gates is a good farmer and if we had ten thousand subscribers just like him it would make us exceedingly happy.

Dr. W. C. VanValin, who dislocated his ankle joint about seven weeks ago in jumping from a lumber wagon while out at Karthaus, is able to use his injured leg to some extent. There was no surgeon near at the time of the accident, so the Doctor exhibited his "old soldier" nerve by pulling the dislocated joint to the proper place himself. He also speaks a word in favor of accident insurance by saying that an agent visited him the day before the accident soliciting him to take out an accident policy. He refused, and is now rather sorry he didn't accept.

D. H. Cannon, a painter living at Port Matilda, while working at his trade in the coal regions in the vicinity of Houtzdale, met with what is reported to be a very serious accident. He was painting a building. The scaffold on which he was standing gave way, precipitating him to the ground. We have heard that both arms were broken at the wrists and that he was otherwise injured. He has the sympathy of all his neighbors. We hope his injuries are not so serious as the first report would lead us to believe.

Business has been good all summer in and around Port Matilda. Among the citizens of that place upon whom we called was Mr. A. S. Price. Knowing his belief in the motto, "Early to bed, etc.," we timed our call as early as six o'clock a. m. and found him saddling his horse preparatory to going to his lumber camp a few miles up the road. He received us with the greatest cordiality and balanced accounts with that method and quickness which makes him such an excellent business man—just the kind that a collector is anxious to meet.

Mr. J. C. Peters, on "Dick's Run," has a very pleasant home, but nevertheless we understand it is his intention to leave it next Spring and move to Unionville. The fine old homestead will be in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Peters. Frank is Mr. J. C. Peters' son and he was only recently married, a notice of the wedding appearing in this paper at the time. His bride is the only daughter of Philip S. Haines, of Wingate, this county. Frank is "a chip of the old block" and will, therefore, run the farm in good shape.

Mr. Reuben Iddings, of near Unionville, together with his son "Phip," are building a new frame dwelling house, located along the pike near Mr. Joseph Davidson's. The house, when completed, will be a neat little dwelling and will be occupied by Philip and his wife. When we were on our way home a heavy storm came up and we arrived at his home just in time to take shelter beneath his hospitable roof. Mr. Iddings made it a profitable storm for us by handing us a V and directed us to credit him on the subscription account, which puts him in first class shape.

The Crop Prospect.

A summary of the prospects of crops this year, which was just made, says that the prospect a month ago was for a very heavy crop of corn and a rate of yield about the average. Its condition in the States along the Atlantic coast is unimpaired and of very high promise, although in Texas, Tennessee, Ohio and Missouri it has fallen off considerably, which reduces the average from 97.7 to 80.7. The cause for this is long continued drought.

The condition of spring wheat, reported very low last month from ravages of chinch bugs, is not improved by the August returns, but has fallen off slightly. The general average is 78.8, which is a little less than the August returns of last year.

The oats crop about holds its own.

It now looks as if there would be a better crop of barley than was supposed possible last month.

In buckwheat crops are about the same as last year.

The drought in several States has caused a falling off in the potato crop at least 20 per cent. from last month's estimate.

In much of the country the hay crop is poor and there should be a good market for Centre county hay.

Apples are reported scarce throughout the country, though they seem to be plentiful in this vicinity.

—We hear that the bonds tendered by the Nittany Valley Railroad Company to the owners of the lands for damages in their right of way have all been apporved by our court and the building of the road will now go forward without further difficulty or delay. It is a good thing that our community possesses some large-minded men who are willing to step in and help forward industries as several of our citizens did in this case, local bondsmen being required. We trust now to see the great furnace in full blast certainly not later than the first of October.

A Plea for Comfortable Houses

It causes us the greatest concern to notice the outrageous mistakes that are perpetrated in the erection of small houses which are intended "for rent." Courtesy requires that we call them "houses," though in the ordinary use and signification of such a term they fall far short of the mark. Of course, it would seem sort of strange to collect tax on sheds or barns, so they must be called houses. And they are houses in the sense that they "house" human beings. They provide them with four straight walls and a roof and these are sufficient to entitle them in the designation "house" But, oh, those four walls! Unbroken by closet, recess or mantel! But as a rule the worst taste is shown in the arrangement of the kitchen. Poor people must live in the kitchen most of their wakeful hours. Yet, nine times in ten, the kitchen is one of the smallest rooms in the house, whereas it should be one of the largest. It is agonizing to a careful housewife to be cramped up in a small kitchen. In erecting a house, however small, do give more attention to this important apartment. Then, too, there is an alarming scarcity of windows in most small houses. Perhaps a straight wall is cheaper than when it is broken by windows. But it is starvation to the inmates to deprive them of the light of day. Abundance of light adds greatly to the interior cheerfulness of a house.

On Nittany Mountain.

The greatest picnic event of this year will be the one to be held on Nittany mountain on the 14th and 15th of September. The exhibition of farm machinery and implements will be much larger than last year and the number of tentholders will be greatly increased. Able speakers will be present both days, who will discuss from a farmer's standpoint the prominent public questions of the day. The grounds have been greatly improved and those having the meeting in charge are doing everything possible to insure a pleasant and profitable time to all who attend. The Patrons of Centre county have entered into this work with their usual vim and spirit of enterprise, and that means that the affair is going to be a grand success in every respect. A low rate of fare has been secured over the Lewisburg and Tyrone railroad and it is presumed the same kindness will also be shown by the Bald Eagle Valley railroad. This will afford Patrons a fine opportunity of attending the picnic and emphasizing the principals for which they are contending. Let there be a grand turnout on this occasion and great good will follow.

Quick Work and Large Profits.

The new school house is being painted and when penciled will look at least 50 per cent. better. Capt. Bayard is at work on the new pavement which he is putting down around the building. He has promised to complete it by the 5th of September, but he expects to have it all finished by the first of the month. Why not put a floor of the same kind in the building? Surely, the floor cannot be finished in any better or more appropriate style. If it is designed as a place for the children to play in inclement weather, such a floor would be very appropriate.

And, by the way, gentlemen of the school board, do you believe that all things will be in readiness for the opening of the schools on September 14. Time flies fast. You have been aware of that ever since you read Tempus fugit. At present the surroundings appear to be exceedingly wild and rugged and not at all like a school yard. Just think of the work of grading, terracing, stair building, etc., that is to be done, and then hurry up. With quick work the profit to the children will be large.

—Mr. Harry Bush met with an accident while traveling along the Susquehanna river on his bicycle the other day. He went from here to Lock Haven and thence to Williamsport. At a place where the river bank was about eighteen feet high his bicycle went over the bank. In the descent he struck a rock, rendering him unconcsious. Had he not been seen by two men on horseback who rescued him from the water, he might have drowned. As it was, he quickly recovered consciousness and now is perfectly well. His bicycle was broken.

—A theological student sat with his girl on a front porch at 10 o'clock last night, on Allegheny street. There was no moon and the air had increasing dampness in it. She was apparently weary of a rather dry conversation. "I hold," said he; "that we extract more that is beneficial from nature than from books." "Well," said his fair companion, "you can keep on holding, but as I don't want Nature to give me a cold, I'm going in the house. Good night."

—The tin roof on Crider's new building is now entirely completed. Of course, it is a masterpiece of mechanism in its way, Messrs. Ollie Miller and David I. Parsons having worked all through the hot days in putting it on. Mr. Parsons says that the heat frequently touched 124° up there in the sun, but that they worked away as heroically as if it was only cool and refreshing 50°. There is really no danger if one has a cabbage leaf in his hat.

A Case of Deafness Cured.

Office of Shaw & Baldwin's Wholesale Notion House, Toledo, O., Dec. 11, '79.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.—Dear Sirs: About three months ago, noticing a letter addressed to you in the Bee from Gen. Slevin, in reference to the cure of his son by the use of Hall's Catarrh Cure, we were induced to commence the use of it for our daughter Nellie now fourteen years old, who has been suffering from catarrh for about eight years, during which time she has been treated by one of the best physicians in the city. We have also tried the use of almost all the known remedies for catarrh, with no more success than temporary relief. Many nights have we laid awake to hold her mouth open to keep her from strangling. Her hearing had also become affected. We were afraid that she would never recover. We have now used six bottles of HALL'S CATARRH CURE, and we believe Nellie to be entirely cured. In a few days after commencing the use of it we noticed a decided change for the better, and from that right along she has improved, until now she breathes as easily as any one. She sleeps well and her hearing is perfectly good. We feel that the disease is entirely removed. We write this unsolicited letter, feeling that it is due you, and with the hope that others may be benefitted in like manner. We can hardly realize that such a change could be effected in so short a time after battling with the disease so long. We are still using the remedy at intervals, as it seems to build up her system. You are at liberty to use this in any manner you see proper. We are yours, truly,

MR. and MRS. S. BALDWIN,

Wanting Better Light.

MR. EDITOR: As one of the sufferers in the matter of deficient light furnished us by the Electric Light Company, I write to thank you for calling the Company's attention to the subject. Many of the street lamps are so covered with fly dirt and dust at this season that it is almost impossible for light to shine through them, even if the power and current applied were sufficient, which on certain lines is greatly deficient. Very respectfully,

LINN STREET.

Bellefonte, August 13, 1887.

—Wednesday and Thursday seem to have been marked by heavy thunder storms throughout Pennsylvania. At Mt. Gretna the rain prevented the grand review, at Newton Hamilton camp-meeting it drenched the large congregations. In Lock Haven, on Thursday, a storm frightened Joe Furey so much that he recalled his censorious remarks about Sam Jones. There was also a very severe storm in Harrisburg.

—The erection of the new steps leading down to the large spring is a wonderful improvement and convenience. A person can step on the lower platform and dip the sparkling water from the spring with perfect ease. Near the spring hang three glasses for drinking purposes. This will attract many more persons to Bellefonte's wonderful spring.

—When the Undine Hose Company arrange for the dedication of their new hose house they must avoid fixing it on Thursday, the 8th of September. The dedication of the new school house is to occur on that date, and the two grand events transpiring at one and the same time in the same locality would be two overwhelmingly utter.

—Stephen Gerrity, of the Seven Mountains, whose death occurred on Tuesday, and whose remains were buried in this place on Thursday, was 82 years of age.

At Night always have Acker's Baby Soother at hand. It is the only safe medicine yet made that will remove all infantile disorders. It contains no Opium or Morphine, but gives the child natural ease from pain. Price 25 cents. Sold by WALTER W. BAYARD.

—The ownership of the Huntingdon car works seems to undergo many changes. A few months ago the information was published that they were humming along industriously under a contract for 1,000 cars. Now it is announced that they have been transferred to Geo. W. Dithridge, President of the Iron Car Company of New York City.

—We have just received one of the prettiest songs ever written, called "There's no one like Mother to me," by Charles A. Davies. Address the publishers, J. C. Groene & Co., 30 and 42 Arcade, Cincinnati, O.

—Pray, what is the matter with the organization of the Undine Hose company? Sometime ago we received an anonymous communication complaining of it and suggesting a new one. The anonymous nature of the communication prevented its publication, besides we could not perceive that the organization proposed was any better than the one already made. But on Monday evening council considered the same subject.

MURDER AND MYSTERY.

A Dream Leads to Some Important Results.

COMMISSIONER GRUGAN,OF CLINTON COUNTY, THE FAMOUS DREAMER.

SOMETHING ABOUT A SUSPICIOUS CHARACTER IN THE BELLEFONTE JAIL.

Grugan seems a very common-place name. The possessor of such a cognomen would not be expected to penetrate, by his mental soarings into dreamland, the secrets which defy human ken—much less to divine what is to occur. But there's nothing in a name, as the sequel will prove.

Grugan is the name of one of Clinton county's commissioners, and of course he is a Democrat. The Daily Democrat, relates the following mysterious occurrence in regard to Mr. Grugan, which we are bound to accept as true and partakes of the marvelous. The story is:

"On the night of Thursday, the 4th instant, as Mr. Grugan lay on his bed asleep, he had a vision, and in that vision he saw a lonely spot, apparently in the wilderness, with something like a house or shed, but which seemed to him more like boards standing on end leaning against trees, with a small corn crib attached. Then he saw a murder committed near a creek, one person doing the bloody work, but apparently with a knife. Two other persons in dark clothes glided in upon the scene, but they did not seem to have any connection with the murder, and were going away from the place. Then in his dream he saw the murderer in another dark and remote spot build a fire and burn some clothes, at the same time secreting something that looked to him like a crowbar and a satchel, putting them in a thicket beneath some underbrush. Then he saw the individual leave the thicket and cross a creek, where he washed the blood from his person, at the same time time making a mark where he crossed the creek. The last seen of the man in dream he was going south, and finally disappeared in the woods.

"Now it must be remembered that Mr. Grugan dreamed this on Thursday night, the 4th instant, two or perhaps three days before the Culvey murder was committed, and it made such an impression on his mind that he made a draft of the locality. Then he told the dream to his associates at the Court House and showed his draft. Of course, he was laughed at, and they had a great deal of fun at his expense. At the time of the dream Mr. Grugan did not known whether the spot he dreamed of was in existence or not. Now for the sequel. On Friday, the 12th, Mr. Grugan, Mr. Brosius, Mr. Herr and Mr. McNaul thought they would drive over to the scene of the Culvey murder, Mr. Grugan being joked with all along the way because of his dream. Two miles or some say a mile and a half this side of the Culvey house they stopped near a thicket covered with grapevines. Mr. Grugan says, "Wait, this looks like a familiar spot." He then entered the place. It was the exact spot he had seen in his dream, where the murderer had concealed the crowbar and burned the clothes. There was evidence that a fire had been built there, but whether recently or some time since could not be told. But, strange to tell, Mr. Grugan came out of the thicket with a gun in his hands, which has since been recognized as the gun stolen from Culvey's house the night or morning of the murder. This corresponds with the crowbar in the dream. No satchel was discovered, we believe, but a shot pouch was. At this point Mr. Grugan's companions ceased to make fun. The dream was coming too nearly to reality. Driving on, they reached the spot where the murder was committed, saw the house, and everything corresponded almost exactly with the dream, even to the spot where the murderer had crossed the creek and made the mark, where they found a small pile of stones and saw his footsteps upon the bank."

So much for the dream. We have a few important circumstances to relate in connection with the murder and the movements of at least one individual. This man is 5 feet 8 or 9 inches high; his hands and face are sunburnt; has sandy side whiskers and moustache—moustache evidently of older growth than his whiskers—his chin shaved smoothly; wears soft black felt hat with narrow brim that fits him closely; long black coat, light brown pantaloons, button shoes. His weight is about 160 pounds. This man was first seen on Thursday night, the 4th, at a point in this county, where he attempted several crimes. On Saturday morning he took an early breakfast at Culvey's house, as was related by Mrs. Culvey to a boy who was at her house Saturday afternoon. Where was he on Sunday? He was seen again in this county on Monday morning and evening. The last time he was seen about ten miles below Rebersburg, going in the direction of Union county. Just what part this man had to do with the highway robberies in that locality of late may be conjectured, but at one place where he called for food, the robberies were spoken of and he left at once.

On Saturday afternoon, the 13th, a man went to the house of Daniel Malone, in Boggs township, and asked for something to eat. One person was reading to another who was in the house an account of the Culvey murder. The listener being partially deaf, the reader's voice was pitched high enough for the man outside to hear. He started away from the house at a rapid rate without waiting for the food. This at once aroused suspicion and he was pursued. So rapidly did the man travel that he was followed two miles before he was overtaken. He was taken before 'Squire Bierley and stubbornly refused to give his name or reply to any question. Then he was committed for vagrancy and on suspicion of having committed some crime. He answers the description given in this article except that he has chin whiskers about two inches long. Ex-Sherif Dunkle asked him what he did with his revolver and he replied—"I haven't got it now." Again asked what he had done with it he told Mr. Dunkle that was none of his business.

Miss Reese, who had a disagreeable experience with a man on the public highway, arrived here on Monday to identify the man in jail, but failed to do so. We are told that the man willingly parted with his knife and other valuables, but fought with all his strength to keep his pocket book. The fellow had to be thrown down and the pocket book forcibly taken from him. This strengthens the theory that the pocket book may belong to some one who was the victim of highway robbery.

Home from Camp.

It was half-past 9 o'clock when the train arrived on Saturday night containing the weary but well pleased Company B, N. G. P., who had spent more than a week at Camp Hancock, Mt. Gretna.

We have it from the most reliable sources that the Fifth regiment stands the highest in the second brigade, and its achievements during the encampment added to its excellent record.

Companies B and H, of the Fifth, won the most commendation. They have the finest stand of arms in the regiment and their discipline during the encampment was faultless.

G. W. Rees, during twenty-four hours, filled the exacting position of sergeant of the guard. After his service was ended Major Compton, one of the most thorough and efficient officers present at camp, called Sergeant Rees to him and said that he must express his satisfaction at the way that duty had been fulfilled, the guard proving itself the most efficient of the camp.

Company B, on Friday evening, received a farewell visit from Adjutant General Hastings and his aids. The General bid each member of the company a personal farewell, congratulating them on their excellence.

The boys report that Quarter Master McMillen is in high favor with all the members of the Fifth.

To Capt. Amos Mullen was accorded an exceedingly high honor. On Friday he was Division Officer of the Day. It is rare to summon a company captain to fill such a high position and few of them are capable of it. It is unnecessary to add that Capt. Mullen was a model Division Officer.

The Reveille, the camp paper, did not give satisfaction. It seemed to labor under the impression that the entire encampment was made up of Philadelphians.

Lieut Geissinger proved himself as gallant as usual, and was particularly well pleased because so many ladies favored the camp with their presence.

Lieutenant Reber is exceedingly popular among all the military men. Sergeant Major Scott Harris added to the general enjoyment, especially when he had an involuntary fall in the lake.

Corporals Harvey Hile and H. C. Yerger were greatly delighted with camp life, and look this morning as if they were benefited by the experience.

The Last of the Season.

The last of the series of excursions to Atlantic City, Cape May,or Sea Isle City, via the Pennsylvania Railroad, will be run on Thursday, August 25th. The immense popularity which these delightful holiday trips have won is indisputable evidence not only of the merit of the excursions,but of the universal attractiveness of these great resorts. The last one of the season comes at a time when the seashore has reached the zenith of its summer glory. Everybody will be there, and everything that the seashore has to offer in the way of enjoyment will be in the pink of condition to afford the greatest amount of pleasure. Neither of the resorts mentioned were ever so well equipped for accommodating the hosts of visitors as they are at present, and no time in their history were they so attractive. This excursion will undoubtedly be the largest as well as the most desirable one of the series, and no one should miss the opportunity it affords. Those who have gone already may go again with the greatest satisfaction,while those who have not gone should remember that it is the last.

The tickets will be good for ten days, and will be sold at the rates quoted on previous occasions. The train will leave Tyrone at 1.20 p. m. Rate from that place, $7.65.

Excursionists will spend the night in Philadelphia and proceed to the seashore by any regular train of the next day.

For detailed information consult the nearest ticket agent.

—The Y. W. C. T. U. met on Monday night and elected officers.

Two Arrests.

A very peculiar condition of affairs surrounds the Colvey murder. On Tuesday morning John Colvey, father of Isaiah Colvey, the murdered man, was arrested. The arrest was made by Constable Robert Clair, of Mill Hall, who claims to have strong evidence against his prisoner. It appears that John Colvey and his nephew, Charlie Colvey, a boy of about thirteen years of age, were fishing on Saturday evening, the 6th, in the neighborhood of the Colvey home, and that John Colvey, the arrested man, sent the boy home, telling him that he wanted to go to a Mr. Moyer's house to get him to cut his hair. Constable Clair, who has been looking the matter up for several days, says he is confident that he can show that John Colvey is the guilty man. It looks to us as if this is an absurd proceeding.

Much more probable is it that a man arrested in Lewisburg was the guilty party. It is related that this man entered a house and inquired for something to eat. The lady of the house refused him, but said she would call her husband. The man replied, "If you call him I will cut his heart out." She then screamed for her husband who entered the house with another man, and both talked and arrested the fellow. He is now held for further examination. He is five feet eight inches high of sandy complexion. He was arrested in Taylorsville, Union county, eight miles from Milton. John Baker, the woman's husband, and Elias Clingan arrested him. It is said that he has shaved off his whiskers and now has only a moustache. He gave the name of William Bennon, and stated that he came across the mountains from Clinton county.

—Chief Burgess H. S. Hale has received a letter from Ed. M. Speer, enclosing a circular, relating the particulars of the destruction by a cyclone of Millbrook, Kansas, when one child was killed and very many wounded. The wholesale destruction of property leaves many of the people entirely destitute and an appeal is made for aid. The appeal says that contributions should be sent to D. M. Smith, Mayor of Millbrook, Graham county, Kansas. It is signed by the city council. The situation of these destitute ones is desperate indeed and it would be a very handsome act for Bellefonte to render them assistance. We suppose any contributions placed in the hands of the Chief Burgess would be sent to Mr. E. M. Speer and by him used wisely in alleviating distress. By the way, Ed. adds in his note that he almost became a sufferer. The post script says: "I was in a cellar. The building fell in on me and I dug my way out of 10 feet of debris. I am unhurt."

—Monday morning H. H. Harshberger, Esq., went out to kill a chicken and concluded to end its life with a shot gun. It was an old gun he had borrowed from H. C. Weaver with which to kill rats. Mr. Harshberger fired at the chicken and killed it. Mrs. Kyle McFarlane was sitting on the porch of her house about 150 feet distant. She felt a slight pain in one of her shoulders and spoke to her husband about it. He at once perceived that a shot had pierced the flesh at that place. How a shot carried so far is a mystery, especially as Mr. H. was shooting in an entirely different direction. The injury is a very slight one, although for a few minutes it effectually frightened all the parties concerned, except Mrs. McFarlane, who was perfectly calm.

Mr. Samuel T. Grays' Withdrawal.

We have authority to state that Mr. Samuel T. Gray, of Patton township, will not be a candidate before the Republican county convention for the office of associate judge. Being a strong personal friend of Mr. Daniel Rhoads, who has been honored with the appointment and who is also announced as a candidate, he deems this action the wisest for himself and the party. He withdraws, too,against the advice of many friends who think he would be nominated. He is deeply grateful to all friends who have testified their friendship with assurances of support.

—Here is the way the late democratic convention distributed its candidates geographically one of the very best offices that of sheriff in Bellefonte. Associate Judge in Gregg township, Treasurer in Harris, Register in College Recorder in Worth, one commissioner from Unionville and one from Haines, the one from Unionville is expected to be the whole board. We do not know Mr. Feidler personally but we hope he will disappoint his party (if he is elected) by having a mind of his own and back bone enough to side with the republican member of the board when he is clearly right.

—We have information that Rev. Mr. Shimpton, rector of the Episcopal church in Galesburg, Illinois, has resigned to accept a call to the church (a mission station) at Ridgway, Elk county, Pa. Rev. Mr. Shimpton is an able and brilliant clergyman and is held in high esteem in Illinois. His reason for moving into the mountain regions of Pennsylvania is solely that the health of himself and family may be improved. His salary from three congregations in Ridgway and vicinity will be less than he has been receiving from one congregation in Galesburg.

DIED.

TATE.—At Pleasant Gap, August 9, 1887, Deforest B. Tate, infant son of Potter and Elizabeth Tate, aged 9 months and 11 days.

BAIRD.—At Milesburg, Pa., on the 28th of July, 1887, Mary Emma, infant daughter of Joseph and Annie Baird, aged 7 months and 9 days.

Our darling's crib is empty now;
Her little voice is hushed.
The tiny form lies silent
With flowers strewn on its breast.

We only learned to love her—
So short her stay with us.
She was only our little baby;
But, oh, we loved her much.

Now we miss our little Mamie;
Sad and lonely is our home;
But God gave—'tis God hath taken—
His will, not ours, be done.

AMELIA MARTIN.
